Nixon on resignation issue: it's up to Spiro

Albert rebuffs Agnew request for House hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House said today that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has discussed the possibility of resigning with President Nixon. A spokesman said Nixon neither encouraged nor discouraged him.

Confirmation by Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren of recent rumors that Agnew had considered resigning came moments after Speaker Carl Albert swiftly turned down Agnew's request that the House rather than the courts undertake an investigation of political wrongdoing against the vice president.

At the White House, Warren made it clear that Agnew's decision to try to get the House to open an inquiry into kickback allegations against him was made solely by the vice president.

Although Nixon discussed various options with Agnew in four meetings they have had since the allegations were announced, he exerted no pressure for any particular course, Warren said.

Warren said for the first time that the two had discussed the possibility of Agnew resigning. When they met Tuesday morning, several hours prior to Agnew's request to the House for an investigation, Agnew made clear he would challenge an investigation scheduled to begin Thursday by a federal grand jury in Baltimore.

Albert rebuffed the vice president's proposal in a brusque two-sentence statement at midday, saying:

"The vice president' s letter (asking for the House hearing) relates to matters before the courts. I, as Speaker, will not take any action on the letter at this time."

Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, who met with Nixon before the President conferred Tuesday with Agnew, announced prior to Agnew's letter to Albert that the grand jury would start its inquiry of Agnew Thursday.

Warren said Nixon was advised by Richardson and Assistant Attorney Henry E. Petersen "that as a matter of law, in the attorney general's view, this procedure should be followed."

As for Agnew's course, Warren said: "The matter involving the vice president is one that he is conducting on his own. The President has taken the position from the outset that the vice president should decide what course he should take in the matter...

"He has not encouraged or pressured the vice president to take any particular course."

Albert would not amplify on his statement rejecting Agnew's request. The statement was issued after he conferred with other House Democratic leaders.

While Albert's action killed for the moment any chance that a House inquiry would take the case out of the hands of a federal grand jury, Agnew was expected to initiate legal moves to try to block the Baltimore panel from proceeding with his case Thursday.

Desert winds pushing area temperatures up

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

Sixty mile-per-hour Santa Ana winds ripped through desert and mountain areas today and warmed up temperatures throughout the Pomona Valley.

The high temperature today is expected to reach 94 degrees, which will make it the warmest day in Pomona since 91 degrees was recorded Aug. 21.

The high wind condition caused the California Highway Patrol today to post traffic wind warnings against camper and trailer movement for all traffic "east of the San Bernardino County line."

Gusty winds up to 40 and 50 miles per hour were reported in areas of Ontario and Chino this morning. Ontario police today said the gusty winds blew a portable restroom and shed from the Ontario Motor Speedway into the street at G Street and Milliken Avenue early this morning, slowing traffic for some time.

The Santa Ana condition caused firemen to be on the alert today. Officials from the U.S. Forest Service issued a "red flag" warning of extreme fire hazards.

Chief John M. Fowlkes of the Pomona Fire Department cautioned residents of the fire hazards during the dry weather condition. He reminded citizens of the residential area in Ganesha hills that was ravaged by fire in late September, 1970. "This area is blocked off to traffic because of the extreme fire danger."

Santa Ana winds whipped the flames that destroyed many expensive homes surrounding Ganesha Park in 1970. The chief said his department would have additional patrols out today.

Forecaster Jim Christopherson of the National Weather Service office in Riverside said the Santa Ana condition will continue through Thursday, bring east to northeast winds below canyon areas.

The strong winds should die down by late Thursday, but warm temperatures should continue throughout the weekend, he said.

The dry condition caused temperatures in Ontario to rise to 80 degrees at 7 a.m. today and almost 80 degrees at the same hour in Riverside.

The Cal Poly weather observation station reported a high of 85 degrees in Pomona Tuesday and a low this morning of 52 degrees. Tonight's low is expected to be 63 degrees.

Senate votes to reduce overseas forces by 40%

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate voted today to cut U.S. troop strength overseas by 40 per cent over the next three years.

In a major surprise, senators adopted, 49 to 46, a proposal by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield to bring many troops home from Europe and other overseas bases by June 30, 1976.

The vote was an amendment to add the provision to the defense authorization bill.

The language is likely to be dropped however before Congress completes action on the defense bill. A majority of House members has opposed any big cutback in U. S. troops in Europe.

However, the Senate action confronted President Nixon and the European community with a major challenge to straighten out financing of 300,000 U. S. troops remaining in Europe a quarter century after World War II.

The vote came after a debate that lasted only two hours. Only a few members were on the floor to hear Mansfield's appeal for a reduction in forces.

Mansfield charged that other nations had grown fat while U. S. funds were drained to pay for their defense.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., led the opposition saying, "We're not in Europe for some altruistic reason. We're not there just to protect the West Europeans. We're there because ...you keep your defense perimeter as far from your own shores as possible ... We're there in the interests of the United States."

Boyle near death of drug overdose

WASHINGTON (UPI)—W. A. "Tony" Boyle lay near death today —being kept alive by mechanical devices —after what his doctor called an apparent suicide attempt with an overdose of drugs.

The former president of the United Mine Workers union was described as in "a deep coma." Officials at George Washington University hospital said he had not regained consciousness since being admitted at 11:30 p.m. EDT Monday, 10 hours before he was to face a hearing connected with multiple murder charges against him.

Memos stored to keep them from subpoena---Buchanan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential aide Patrick J. Buchanan told the Senate Watergate Committee today the White House has stored pre-election political strategy memos with President Nixon's official papers to protect them from subpoena by investigators.

Buchanan, a speech writer who opened his first appearance before the committee by claiming its staff tried to damage his reputation with news leaks, said he did not bring along subpoenaed documents dealing with campaign strategy on the advice of White House lawyers.

At one point, he said he had urged Nixon campaign forces in 1971 to mount a concentrated effort against Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, then the leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination. But he insisted that he never advocated any illegal actions.

"Is it the position of counsel at the White House that these memoranda dealing with political campaign strategy are not available under the subpoena because of executive privilege?" asked the committee's chief counsel, Samuel Dash.

"I think you would have to ask (White House) counsel what their position is, but I think that's not unreasonable in light of the fact that many of the memoranda are to the President of the United States, many of the memoranda deal with recommendations for presidential action, many of the memoranda were prepared at the direction of the President," Buchanan replied.

A summary of committee staff interviews earlier with Buchanan indicated he was part of a White House group that plotted "dirty tricks" in the 1972 presidential campaign, but he said today that his memos reflected nothing "illicit, unethical, improper or unprecedented."

He acknowledged that some of the language used in them was "uninhibited."

Buchanan said the memos covered the 1971-72 period and were taken from his personal files earlier this year to the basement of the Executive Office Building next door to the White House for inclusion with official presidential papers.

MOBILE HOME PARK NOW A JUNKYARD

Residents of a demolished mobile home park in Salina, Kan., regroup on the top of a hill Tuesday after a tornado slammed into area. The park contained 44 mobile homes.

Dynamite search

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — Citizen volunteers joined sheriff's deputies Tuesday in a house-to-house search for a hidden cache of dangerously deteriorated dynamite, capable of destroying a city block.

The dynamite is believed hidden in a garage somewhere in Isla Vista, the student quarter where the University of California at Santa Barbara is located. Isla Vista was the scene of two major student riots in 1970 and 1971.

Twisters, rains leave at least five dead, 100 injured in 12 Kansas towns

CLAY CENTER, Kan. (UPI) — Tornadoes and torrential rains ripped through a dozen Kansas communities Tuesday night killing at least five persons and injuring more than 100 others.

Property damage was heaviest at Clay Center in Central Kansas where the business district was destroyed. Two children were buried and crushed to death at their home in Greenleaf; a 67-year-old woman died in the collapse of her Niles residence and two other persons were swept away in their car by raging waters.

The tornado that hit Greenleaf trapped a family of five in the debris of their basement and ruptured nearby ammonia and propane tanks.

Rescuers without gas masks ignored the fumes to remove the family, but two of the children were dead when they arrived at a hospital. The parents and infant were in fair condition.

"It took af lot of guts for those men to go in there after the trapped family," said a sheriff's dispatcher who described the events as "a nightmare that seems like it's lasted forever."

Ammonia fumes spread over the tiny town and its residents were evacuated.

"Everybody left except those trying to get people out," said the dispatcher. "Most of them went to a church south of town. The propane leak has been stopped, I think, but the ammonia is still a problem."

Military personnel from Ft. Riley were ordered to Greenleaf.

"We've got everybody available out tracing the path of the storm and looking for people," said the dispatcher.

Near Ellsworth a car carrying a man and woman was swept off a state highway and into a water-filled ditch.

"There's not a trace of them but it seems certain they're dead," said the county sheriff's office. "They were seen in the water, the car has been recovered and they haven't been found."

Suspects in custody

Two girls raped, tossed over cliff into river; 1 survives

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) —A teen-age girl told police Tuesday she and her 11-year-old sister, stranded by a flat tire on their car, were raped and tossed over a 250-foot cliff into the North Platte River.

Ronald Leroy Kennedy, 27, and Jerry Lee Jenkins, 29, both of Casper, were arrested by investigators and charged with first-degree murder and forcible rape.

Police said the men were charged under a new state law that called for a mandatory death penalty upon conviction.

The 18-year-old survivor told police of the ordeal after being found by a fisherman sitting near a bridge in Fremont Canyon.

Police said the body of the survivor's 11-year-old sister was pulled from the river several hours later.

Police said the survivor said she and her sister became stranded because of the flat tire Monday night. Two men, Burk said, stopped their car and offered help.

Instead, the men assaulted both girls and then pushed them over the steep edge of the canyon into the river. The eldest girl stuffered a broken hip but managed to crawl back up to the road.

"The eldest one spent the night down in the canyon with a broken hip but managed to climb out," police said. "It was quite an ordeal of terror.

"She had a lot of courage to climb back out of the canyon with her hip the way it was."

Many processors using defective equipment

FDA opens nationwide check on mushroom firms

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Federal food inspectors are launching a search of more than 5,000 warehouses across the country to check every can of mushrooms they can find for signs of poisoning.

At the same time the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warned consumers not to open or eat any can of mushrooms now on home shelves that may be swollen, leaky or appear in any other way to be abnormal.

The massive warehouse search and the warning were triggered by an intensive FDA investigation of the mushroom industry which the agency said revealed that half of the 42 known mushroom processing plants in the country were using defective equipment or inadequate operating proceedures.

FDA began its investigation after a spate of industry recalls —five so far this year— involving mushrooms contaminated with botulinum poison. The toxin, which attacks the central nervous system and can cause death, usually results from inadequate cooking procedures during the canning process.

FDA Commissioner Dr. Alexander Schmidt said the agency has imposed "new mandatory production safeguards" on the mushroom industry and "we are...confident that mushroom processors can now produce a safe product."

"However, because of a series of recent recalls caused by botulinum contamination, we believe it is necessary to expand our examination to all outstanding mushroom stocks canned before industrywide corrective measures were instituted," Schmidt added.

Suspect cans will be given a laboratory test and, if contaminated, a recall extending down to the retail level will follow, the agency said. The process is expected to take two months.

Meanwhile, persons finding suspicious cans are urged to advise their nearest FDA office.

Top labor leader gunned down

Argentina paralyzed by assassination strike

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentina's powerful General Federation of Workers (CGT) paralyzed the country today with a general strike to protest the assassination by guerrillas of CGT leader Jose Rucci on Tuesday.

Rucci, 48, a strong supporter of president-elect Juan D. Peron, was the country's top labor leader. His position was similar to that of AFL-CIO President George Meany in the United States.

The CGT called a general strike from 6 p.m. Tuesday until midnight today. Buenos Aires, a city of over 7 million people, appeared deserted today. Offices were closed, stores were shuttered and there were no buses or taxis. All national and international airline flights were cancelled.

Rucci's funeral, expected to draw a multitude of mourners, was scheduled for 4 p.m.

Peron and his wife Isabel, the vice president elect, attended the wake at the CGT headquarters Wednesday morning.

Rucci was gunned down Tuesday afternoon as he left his home in Buenos Aires. The slaying came two days after Peron won a landslide victory for a third term as president.

Gen. Miguel Angel Iniguez, head of the national police, blamed the murder of the conservative labor leader on the People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), a Marxist guerrilla group that has taken credit for a three-year wave of kidnapings and political murders.

Iniguez, who took over Monday as police chief, issued a decree at his swearing-in ceremony outlawing the ERP and vowed to wipe out the Marxist group.

"If anything happens to me, I want it to be very clear that it was the Trotskyites and Marxists," Rucci said in a recent interview. "All of us are threatened by the ERP, the enemies of Peron."

Police and witnesses said several of the gunmen hid in a vacant apartment adjoining Rucci's house and others took up posts on the roof of a school across the street.

The gunmen opened fire with automatic rifles and shotguns just as Rucci, preceded by bodyguards, stepped into a waiting car to keep an appointment for a television interview.

Rucci was the seventh top labor leader to be slain in Argentina since guerrillas gunned down metalworkers chief Augusto Vandor, then the most powerful union official in the country, in 1969.

$100,000 Hughes gifts told

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Howard Hughes gave $100,000 in cash to Bebe Rebozo for President Nixon, and $50,000 to then Vice President Hubert Humphrey because he wanted to "own the President," a former top aide to the billionaire recluse has charged.

The accusation was made by Robert Maheu, who is involved in a bitter legal battle with Hughes.

In court depositions made public Tuesday, Maheu said that two suitcases, each containing $50,000 in cash, had been given to Rebozo, Nixon's close friend.

Richard Danner, a Hughes aide who is now general manager of the Hughes-owned Sands Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev., gave Rebozo the first suitcase at the Western White House in 1969, Maheu said.

Maheu said he and Danner gave Rebozo the second suitcase in 1970 at Key Biscayne, Fla., where Rebozo has a home.

He said he gave Humphrey $50,000 in cash during the 1968 presidential campaign, handing it to Humphrey as the vice president sat in a limousine outside the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

Hughes also acted to give Sen. Robert Kennedy $25,000 that year, but Kennedy was assassinated before the money was delivered, so the cash went to Democratic National Committee Chairman Larry O'Brien instead, Maheu said.

Maheu said Hughes wanted to "own the President, choose his successor, members of the Supreme Court, senators, congressmen and politicians at all levels."

Murder case witness tells of pot smoking

POMONA — A friend of murder victim Cheryl P. Brown testified Tuesday at Lee Donald Lakey's trial in Pomona Superior Court that she, the victim and a young man smoked marijuana and played records in Cheryl's apartment the night Cheryl was killed.

Debbie Norman said that she, Cheryl and a friend, Mike Wallace, smoked three marijuana cigarettes the evening of Jan. 13, the night before Cheryl was found strangled in the apartment at 759 E. San Francisco Ave.

Later, Debbie said, the three ate hamburgers and drank soft drinks before she and Wallace left. By then, she testified, no one was "high," the effects of the marijuana having worn off.

Lakey, 22-year-old busboy, is accused of murder in Cheryl's strangulation. The trial, before Judge Glenn M. Pfau, is his second. The first ended in a mistrial last May.

Debbie told the jury that Cheryl planned to go directly to bed after she and Wallace left. The young woman testified that Cheryl had set her hair and told her that she was very tired and planned to retire immediately because she had to work the next day.

Miss Norman said she and Wallace left at 11 or 11:15 p.m. Wallace was a former boyfriend of hers, Miss Norman said. Police feel Cheryl was killed shortly thereafter.

Miss Brown had just moved into the apartment, her first residence since moving from the family home in Chino. It was to have been her first night in the apartment.

The victim was found strangled in the apartment the next day when her sister, Michelle Brown, 21, went there to find out why she had not arrived at their mother's home as had been planned.

Lakey lived in a building adjacent to the victim's and had loaned her tools for use in the apartment as she prepared to move in.

Maryland contractor tells of $15,000 gift to Agnew

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A Maryland contractor has told federal prosecutors that he personally turned over an estimated $15,000 in cash to Spiro T. Agnew after Agnew became vice president, the Washington Star-News said today.

In a copyrighted story, reporter Jerry Oppenheimer wrote that Lester Matz alleged that some of the payments consisted of cash he "generated" from contracting firms seeking business favors.

The story said the information about Matz's testimony came from a reliable source. J. Marsh Thomson, Agnew's press spokesman, termed the report as another "inaccurate and unsubstantiated rumor."

According to the Star-News, there was no indication that the vice president ever solicited the cash gifts from Matz.

Oppenheimer wrote: "Matz, the source said, told the investigators that in almost all cases he handed the money to Agnew personally, sometimes in the vice president's office. The businessman is said to have told the prosecutors that the payments were made as late as mid-1972."

Agnew became vice president on Jan. 20, 1969.

Oppenheimer's story added: "Matz has told the prosecutors, the source said, that he allegedly gave the money to Agnew because he thought it was 'expected of him' since for years Matz has been a close friend of the vice president and a campaign fund raiser for him."

The Star-News also said Matz had turned over to the U. S. attorney's office in Baltimore calendars and notes having to do with the collection of money and has undergone a lie detector test administered by the prosecutors.

Agnew leans on history for support

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew reached back 150 years for one of two precedents to support his request Tuesday for a House investigation of charges involving him.

In his letter to House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., Agnew cited an 1826 demand by Vice President John C. Calhoun of South Carolina for an investigation of charges he had illegally profited from an Army contract signed while he was secretary of war.

The House established a select committee to investigate the charges against Calhoun, and he was exonerated on Feb. 13, 1827. Agnew said the Calhoun case supports his claim that "the Constitution bars a criminal proceeding of any kind—federal, state, county or town—against a president or vice president while he holds office."

Agnew quoted at length from Calhoun's letter to the House, which said that when public attacks on his integrity assumed "the character of impeachable offenses, and become, in some degree official by being placed among the public records, an officer thus assailed ... can look for refuge only to the Hall of the Immediate Representatives of the People."

The only other direct precedent to Agnew's case is that of Schuyler T. Colfax, vice president under Ulysses S. Grant, who was accused in 1872 of having taken a bribe of 20 shares of stock in the Credit Mobilier, an immensely profitable company that built the Union Pacific railroad under government subsidy. Colfax was speaker of the House when he was said to have accepted the shares.

He, too, was investigated by a House select committee, which turned up additional evidence that he accepted $4,000 from a stationery contractor while he was chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. But the Judiciary Committee decided in 1873 that he could not be impeached for crimes commited before he became vice president.

The only elected executive officer ever actually impeached was President Andrew Johnson, brought to trial in 1868 after what was largely a political argument with hawkish House Republicans over reconstruction policy in the South. Johnson was acquitted by a one-vote margin.

Witness identifies two as attackers

POMONA — George Ryan, a 52-year-old former Pomona resident, identified two Riverside men as the pair who forced their way into his home and bound and gagged him, his wife and their son and daughter in an attack in which the young people's throats were cut.

Ryan pointed out Arnold Keith Spears, 22, and James Franklin Hooker, 21, as the armed pair which invaded his home at 797 E. Harrison Ave. the evening of March 23.

Spears and Hooker are on trial in Pomona Superior Court, charged with attempted murder, robbery and burglary. The trial is before Judge August J. Goebel.

Skylab astronauts in good shape after 59 days in space

ABOARD USS NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —Doctors said the Skylab 2 astronauts were in surprisingly good shape today with their only apparent problem unsteadiness from a record 59 days in weightless space.

"At the present time, they look better than the first crew," reported Dr. Royce Hawkins, chief astronaut physician in Houston.

Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma more than doubled the duration of the Skylab 1 mission, and Hawkins gave an increased exercise regimen as a possible explanation for the good condition of the Skylab 2 crewmen.

"They're in good shape," Hawkins said after doctors aboard this recovery ship completed a thorough, seven-hour physicial examination. He said the spacemen were tired after a rigorous 24-hour splashdown day and planned to sleep late today in horizontal beds for the first time since they left Cape Kennedy July 28.

The New Orleans was expected to reach U.S. waters later today but the astronauts will remain aboard in San Diero, Calif., until the all-important initial physical checks are finished. The pilots are due home in Houston Thursday evening.

The early condition of the astronauts buoyed the hopes of life scientists that the human body adapts to weightlessness without continuous physical deterioration. This would mean that flights of unlimited duration are possible.

Pardon hearing for murder accomplice

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) —The Nebraska Pardon Board will hold a hearing Oct. 30 on the latest freedom bid of Caril Ann Fugate, who has spent half her life in prison as the accomplice of mass murderer Charles Starkweather.

The board voted 2-1 Tuesday in favor of granting Miss Fugate a hearing. Gov. J. J. Exon and Secretary of State Allen Beermann voted in favor of accepting the case and setting it for hearing, while Attorney General Clarence Meyer voted against consideration.

Miss Fugate, 30, is serving a life sentence at the Women's Reformatory in York, Neb., as an accomplice of Starkweather. The pair's travels through Nebraska and Wyoming in 1958 resulted in the deaths of 11 persons. Starkweather died in the electric chair in 1959.

GOP chairman has eyes on N. Jersey

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — GOP Chairman George Bush said Tuesday "the eyes of the nation are on New Jersey" in the November election. Bush was in Trenton to meet with the state committee and also with Charles W. Sandman Jr., the Republican candidate for governor.

He told Sandman campaign workers their candidate was "on the right side of the issues bothering the people." Bush listed the issues as crime in the streets and inflation.

He said people across the nation will be closely watchin gNew Jersey's gubernatorial race because it is only one of two this year. The other is in Virginia.

Ex-priest, former nun to have child

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Despite their status as excommunicated Catholics, antiwar activists Phillip Berrigan, a priest, and his wife Elizabeth McAlister, a nun, plan to raise the child they are expecting in the church.

The couple, who have been married about a year, announced Tuesday they are expecting a child in April. "Elizabeth and I both still believe in the church and see ourselves as Christians — peace makers — and hope the same for our child," Berrigan said.

Berrigan and his wife were excommunicated from the church when they were married, breaking their vows of celibacy.

'Mad bomber' asks for his freedom

NEW YORK (UPI) —George Metesky, the "mad bomber" who was convicted of staging a 16-year one-man bomb attack on New York starting in 1941, could soon be a free man.

Metesky was judged mentally incompetent to stand trial when he was arrested in 1957. But his attorneys said Tuesday they asked for his freedom on the basis of a new law saying such defendants cannot be institutionalized longer than two-thirds of the maximum sentence they would have received had they been convicted.

Metesky planted explosives in Radio City Music Hall, the public library, Grand Central Station, and various other places. No one was ever killed by the bombs, but 22 persons were injured. He said he planted the bombs because he was unable to get compensation for injuries suffered in an accident at United Electric and Power Co. in the Bronx.

Art works stolen from oil heir

NEW YORK (UPI) —Burglars sneaked into the Manhattan apartment of Peter Salm, heir to the Standard Oil fortune, and stole 32 paintings valued at $132,000, police said Tuesday.

Salm, 47, has not been home since Sept. 22. Police said the burglars climbed up a drain pipe to a window ledge on the second story and broke a sliding glass door.

Salm's fortune came from his great-grandfather, Henry H. Rogers, a partner of John J. Rockefeller.

Grocer becomes lottery millionaire

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) —Victory Robinson, 59, a self-employed grocer from Toledo, Ohio, won a million dollars Tuesday night in a state lottery drawing.

Robinson, who wept as he accepted the check, was the sixth person to win Michigan's top lottery.

Armed man rapes Pomona woman

Pomona woman told police she was pulled into an apartment and raped Tuesday morning by an armed man who later escaped police in a foot chase at 7th Street and Garey Avenue.

The young woman said she was on her way to the county health department at 7th Street and Park Avenue when the man stopped her and then pulled her inside a two-story apartment building at 638 W. 4th St.

Inside, she said, he threatened her with a .45-caliber automatic pistol and attacked her. She said he then went with her to the health department building where she escaped later.

A lone officer saw the suspect at Garey Avenue and Mission Boulevard a few minutes later and tried to question him. But the man fled through an alley and through the United Pentecostal Church. During the chase both he and the policeman pointed their weapons at each other but neither fired.

After the suspect escaped, his pistol, loaded with four rounds of .45-caliber ammunition, was found lying on the sidewalk near the church.

Senate votes added funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate voted 66 to 26 Tuesday to add $496 million to the defense authorization bill to allow the Navy to buy 50 more F14 Tomcat fighters.

The Senate Armed Services Committee had voted to cut that money out of the bill last spring.

The committee complained at the time that it did not have enough information on what new deal the Navy would make with Grumman Aerospace Corp. of Bethpage, N.Y., after the Navy agreed to junk an old contract with Grumman because of mounting costs.

The Navy signed a new contract Monday and the majority of members of a subcommittee overseeing the plane said they were satisfied.

Sens. Thomas McIntyre, DN.H., and Peter Dominick, R-Colo., charged that a Navy rush program to build the Trident submarine risked serious errors that could set the program back for years.

STILL GOING STRONG — Speedy Jacobs, a young 101 from Chino, entertained horse track fans at the Los Angeles County Fair Tuesday as he rode a surrey pulled by a registered Shetland pony, Black Doll, around the grandstand track. The surrey was sponsored by La Vida Mineral Hot Springs. Black Doll is owned by Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Beaty, and is recipient of 128 trophies. At Jacobs' side is his poodle, Twiggy.

Broncs coming to the fair

POMONA —Rodeo, one of most exciting of sports originated in the U.S., will come to the Los Angeles County Fair as a free grandstand attraction Thursday night.

Top performers on the 1973 Rodeo Cowboys Association circuit will be competing for prize money the last four days of the fair, but even more important, for points that will move them closer to the grand champion finals later this year.

Many local riders will be vying in the show Thursday at 8 p.m.

Fair officials hope that attendance which has been falling behind record-setting 1972 fair totals will increase appreciably because of the warmer weather brought on by the Santa Ana winds sweeping in from the desert.

Attendance at the fair Tuesday was 41,048, about 1,000 less than on the last Tuesday last year.

A total of 822,830 persons have toured the fairgrounds. Attendance in 1972 during a comparable period was 853,137.

The fair will be in full swing Thursday with events scheduled throughout the grounds. Daily demonstrations are scheduled in the Home Arts Building, and the world's fastest sheep shearer Godfrey Bowey who has sheared an animal a minute over a nine-hour period will be on hand in the livestock area at 3 and 7 p.m.

Horse races on the grandstand course will be run in honor of the city of Claremont, Cal Poly Pomona, and Montclair Plaza.

Girl falls out of car

ONTARIO — An Ontario girl was injured Tuesday night when she fell out the door of a moving car turning right onto Fifth Street from San Antonio Avenue. The car ran over both her legs.

Danya Stallings of 429 W. Nevada St., Ontario, was listed in satisfactory condition at the San Bernardino County General Hospital with a fractured left leg and other injuries suffered in the 8:45 p.m. accident.

Police said the car, driven by Douglas Ray Howard, 21, of 4356 Mission Blvd., was making a right turn when the unlocked passenger door opened and Miss Stallings fell to the pavement. Howard told police he saw Miss Stallings fall underneath the car and tried to put on the brakes, but hit the car's accelerator instead. The car ran over Miss Stallings legs.

Howard was not cited by police.

Food course at Cal Poly

POMONA — The study of other countries' and ethnic groups' food patterns can lead to an increased understanding of the people, their culture, history, socio-economic status and geographical location, according to Miss Ruthann Davis, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Cal Poly.

Students in the course, "Ethnic Food Patterns," will be doing just that — studying food patterns and the factors that influence these patterns. The course will be conducted every Wednesday evening, today through Nov. 28 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the School of Environmental Design, Room 113. It is of special interest to secondary home economics, language or social science teachers.

Class participants in teams of two will research and study the food patterns of an ethnic group or country of their choosing and prepare a report to the class, including a menu which the entire class will prepare and eat. The course will also include the relationship of food patterns to world health.

Tuition for the three-unit course is $51.75 plus an additional $15 lab fee. To register, contact the educational services office at 598-4391. Registration will be accepted through the second class meeting.

Christmas display talk on agenda

POMONA — The Pomona Cultural Arts Commission will meet tonight at 7:30 in the city hall boards and commissions room to discuss Christmas lighting displays for the Civic Center Plaza.

Dr. Robert L. Davis is chairman of the Cultural Arts Commission.

The City Council has asked commission members to recommend a Christmas lighting and decoration design for city hall, the library and the courts plaza.

In a letter to Davis, assistant city administrator Joseph F. Korpsak asked that the commission consider unique displays "without religious themes."

Korpsak said he thought the overall decorations should not cost more than $5,000 and agreed to recommend that the City Council approve a source for the funds.

Hurricane slows, fears diminish

LOSMOCHIS, Mexico (UPI) —Hurricane Irah, its winds diminishing to less than 100 m.p.h., swept inland today and weathermen said the storm appeared to be blowing itself out.

Gadbriel Loyola of the Mexico City weather bureau said Irah would hit land at 9 a.m. (noon EDT) 30 miles northwest of this northern Mexican city, after crashing up the Gulf of California overnight.

"But now she has become more of a tropical storm," Loyola said.

"Her winds have dropped below 100 miles an hour. She could still do a lot of damage, but not what we originally feared."

California drivers mob gas stations

By United Press International

Motorists mobbed the tanks in California Tuesday after filling station operators who had been closed for four days to protest the freeze on gasoline prices re-opened, pronouncing their protest a "tremendous success."

An estimated 9,400 stations from central California to the Oregon state line had been closed.

Dealers in Gary and Hammond, Ind., also ended their shutdown, voting to wait and see what the government does about allowing them to pass on to the consumer recent penny-a-gallon increases in the wholesale price of gasoline.

If the government permitted only a token increase, a spokesman warned, the dealers could shut down again immediately.

In New Hampshire, however, many dealers were only beginning to protest. The state auto club said 45 per cent of the stations were closed, many in Manchester and the Lake Winnipesaukee area. Dealers in other areas said they would be willing to go along with the shutdowns.

"It's a bad time of the month for all of us because we're draining the bottom of our September allocations," said one dealer who stayed open. "I just can't take all this extra business right now."

The executive director of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers said in Little Rock, Ark., that there would be no need for a nationwide shutdown to protect gasoline prices because the prices would run service stations out of business.

"They're going broke," said John M. Huemmrich. "You can't continue to lose $50 to $100 a day and stay in business and that's what the average dealer is losing."

L.V. turns to study

Master plan impact eyed

LA VERNE — The Planning commission, having completed all but the cleanup work on the city's master plan of growth, is turning its attention on how the new plan will effect the community.

Commissioners heard a one-hour presentation Tuesday night by Edward Hartouni, a physicist who is the president of the Institute for Environmental Quality in Claremont, on what such an impact report should include.

In Hartouni's opinion, the study should concern itself with how the community will be effected by changes in land use, in projections for schools, in air and noise pollution, in open space, and parks and recreation, among other things.

But the guidelines were necessarily broad, and the commission deferred action until the city staff had a chance to learn more about what's required by the state for the impact report.

"We're not sure how detailed the report has to be," Planning Director Charles Le Gros explained. "Environmental impact reports are still in their infancy, and this latest ruling requiring an EIR on the general plan is only a few weeks old."

Le Gros said the minimum report would require the city to show the effect of the general plan on the physical, social and economic level of the community, "but we may go for more than that, such as a seismic report, or a housing element."

He said he planned to ask the City Council for guidance, but hoped to complete the impact report by the end of the year.

Le Gros said he preferred an outside consultant because an outsider would probably be more objective and would have more expertise in the field.

Import surge puts trade balance in red

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A big surge in imports last month dropped the U. S. trade balance into the red in August after an unusual surplus in July, the Commerce Department reported today.

At the same time, an index of business indicators that is considered a good measure of future economic trends continued to rise in August, but most of the increase was due to inflation.

The value of goods imported last month exceeded exports by $17 million. The Commerce Department noted that the narrow trade deficit followed a $106 million surplus in July, second of the year, and an equally small $16 million deficit in June.

The August figures indicated a continuing improvement in the nation's foreign trade performance, largely on the strength two dollar devaluations that have made American goods better bargains overseas and foreign-produced items more expensive here.

The government's composite index of leading economic indicators gained 1.2 per cent last month but only 0.6 per cent in July, sharply down from the 1.1 per cent advance originally reported.

The August gain was deceptive since six of the eight indicators available for the preliminary report declined and only two went up.

Spent 3 years in prison

Man believed innocent of murder is freed

CHICAGO (UPI) —A machinist who spent three years in prison for a murder police now believe another man committed was freed Tuesday. He said he will sue the state for his imprionsment.

Wilbur McDonald, 33, dressed in a double breasted black suit, listened calmly as Criminal Court Judge Frank J. Wilson set aside his 100-to 150-year prison sentence.

"I wish you the best of luck," the judge said.

McDonald of Chicago was convicted for the July 11, 1970, slaying of Mrs. Agnes Lehmann in Chicago's Grant Park. He was released from prison Aug. 15 on a personal recognizance bond after another man was captured Aug. 13.

McDonald, who has already returned to his job, said he planned to file suit against the state seeking compensation for his three years in prison. He said he would also petition to have his name cleared of all charges.

"It's good to be out," he said, "and it is very good that they caught someone else but sad that another woman was killed in the process."

Police have not confirmed the confession of Lester Harrison, 51, of Chicago, but moved quickly to release McDonald after Harrison was accused of another Grant Park killing Aug. 13. The victim, Judith Ott, 28, of Seattle, Wash., was stabbed to death in a washroom.

Assistant State's Attorney Thomas Fitzgerald who prosecuted McDonald three years ago asked that no further legal action be taken against him.

Brown balks at barring newsmen from meet, then blasts initiative

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. bit the hand that fed him and got away with it.

When Reagan administration consumer officials invited him to speak at their luncheon Tuesday, Brown accepted with delight and prepared a menu of verbal assaults against Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax initiative.

But when an administration official refused to permit press coverage of his speech, Brown balked and threatened to walk out if newsmen could not stay.

"I've never been asked to speak at a secret meeting of public officials before," said Brown, a contender for the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial nomination. "We are going to talk about state business and it would be improper conduct to meet behind closed doors."

But John Wolfe, president of the Consumer Affairs Department's Executive Officers Association, didn't see it that way. "This is not a public meeting," he replied. "We are not making any decisions affecting the public."

After a lengthy, low-key exchange between Brown and Wolfe, the association decided to vote on the controversy. With newsmen locked outside the back room of a restaurant frequented by lawmakers and lobbyists, the association voted overwhelmingly to open the doors.

Brown then joined the officials for lunch and thanked them, saying: "I can't see how you can keep a government honest unless you make it open to the public."

He then proceeded to attack Reagan's initiative, contending the Nov. 6 ballot proposal would have a "catastrophic" effect on the Consumer Affairs Department.

"Gov. Reagan's record shows he has little concern for consumer protection, and the department will very likely be an early victim of cutbacks mandated by this measure," he said.

In a question-and-answer session, the department officials disputed Brown's claims, saying the initiative appeared to be the only possible approach to stop tax increases.

"That's what you have a governor and a legislature for," Brown said. "No magic formula is going to stop free-spending state officials from wasting your money."

Even with the governor's "cut, squeeze and trim policy," Brown said, the state budget under Reagan has doubled in his seven years in office because of the need "for better school, more beaches and parks and other public services."

"This demand is not going away in 1975 no matter who is governor," Brown added.

Wolfe, executive officer of the department's Geology Board, said the association had invited several other top state officials to their private meetings in the past without objection.

He said those who had addressed the group included three other contenders for governor — Attorney General Evelle J. Younger, Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco and Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti of Van Nuys. Younger is Republican while Moscone and Moretti are Democrats.

Reagan assures aged, disabled welfare aid won't be cut

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Reagan administration is launching a publicity offensive to assure crippled, aged and blind welfare recipients that their grants won't be cut back Jan. 1, it was learned today.

One official said the campaign would seek to offset claims of Democratic lawmakers who warned that the legislature's failure to enact a supplemental aid system could lead to "mass starvation and suicide" among recipients.

So far, reported spokesmen for the Social Welfare Department and the Health and Welfare Agency, there has been virtually no mail from recipients expressing fear that their grants will be reduced.

"We've got a gut feeling that there is confusion out there," said Tony Browne, an assistant to Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian. "We want to do everything we can do to assure people that the grants are not going to be cut."

Among other things, state officials have been urged to express such an assurance when they make public speeches, local welfare departments are being given the same assurance and even a direct mailing to recipients is being considered.

At the heart of the issue is Gov. Ronald Reagan's intention to implement by administrative regulations his own plan to provide state supplemental aid to 500,000 California recipients of aid to the aged, blind and disabled.

The Senate on the last day of the 1973 session killed for lack of two votes a bipartisan plan sponsored by Democrats to increase the grants of adult recipients effective Jan. 1, the day the federal government takes over administration of programs for the blind, elderly and disabled.

If California fails to implement a supplemental payment program by Jan. 1, welfare grants in those categories automatically will be reduced to the federal level of $130 per person.

Under Reagan's plan whose constitutionality is disputed by Democrats and welfare rights groups, the benefit level would be increased to an average $221 per person in the aged and disabled categories and to $237 for a blind individual.

Currently, grants average $209 a month for an elderly person, $204 for a disabled recipient and $222 for a blind individual, according the welfare department figures.

The compromise legislation which overwhelmingly passed the Assembly called for increasing the grants of the blind to $255 a month and to $230 for the elderly and disabled.

Youth, 16, arrested in kidnap, rape

MONTCLAIR — Police Tuesday arrested a 16-year-old Montclair youth after he was seen near the K-Mart store at Palo Verde Street and Central Avenue by two girls he allegedly kidnaped and attempted to rape Sept. 13.

Police said the juvenile is now in custody for investigation of kidnaping and attempted rape. The two female victims, 16 and 17 from West Covina and Montclair, spotted the youth after being interviewed by police. Police said the girls were earlier asked to come to the police station to look at photographs of suspects.

After viewing the photographs, the girls went to the K-Mart store and saw the suspect who had kidnaped them fron in front of the Mayfair Market at Central Avenue and Benito Street Sept. 13. The girls reported that the youth, after asking them for a ride, pulled a knife and ordered the girls to drive him to an isolated Fontana area where he attempted to rape them.

Police earlier arrested a 17-year-old youth for questioning in the case but he was later released.

Brewer sued over bite by stallion

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — Lillan R. Blackwell has asked $25,600 in a suit against the brewers of Budweiser beer, because she said when she offered one of the Budweiser "Clydesdale stallions" a lump of sugar, the horse bit her finger.

Her attorneys charged Tuesday the company was negligent in not warning her that the horse "had a propensity to attack and bite people" while she visited Grant's Farm in St. Louis on Sept. 20, 1971.

But Anheuser-Busch, Inc., brewers of Budweiser, which uses the horses in promotional activities, said the horse was "not vicious and did not have vicious propensities." The name of the accused horse is "That's Life."

A trial date has not yet been set.

Spanish hotel's tidbits of life

By DONALD W. REYNOLDS

MARBELLA, Spain — Undoubtedly the most fascinating aspects of travel are the contacts with out-of-this-world folks, both fellow tourists and natives.

Casual conversations with people you never again expect to see — a ships-that-pass-in-the-night sort of background — lend enchantment to the commonist sort of talk. And where better to enjoy such experiences than among the visitors to the Costa del Sol?

"The soliciting of alms is a noble profession" insisted one of my conversationalists at the swimming pool bar at the Incosol. He was a Moor, returning to Spain and Malaga, from where his ancestors had been expelled five hundred years ago. Obviously a financial success, he was telling me in excellent English of his family background.

His father and his father's father had been beggars along the winding lanes of the Casbah in Algiers. Certainly not paupers, not even impecunous.

It took almost an hour of careful listening to finally understand that he was engaged, as a family business, in what we would call the protection racket. It was, as he explained, "a living." One that enabled him to pay $150 a day for one of the most elaborate suites in the hotel and at least for a short time give him a vacation from his work across the straits in North Africa.

Spanish craftsmen, famed throughout the world for the exquisite leather goods are facing new problems. Of all things, they blame the women's lib movement in the United States.

"It took a boyishly exhuberant president to free the male sex from their unattractive, unnecessary head pieces. Today men's hat mills have gone the way of the buggy whip factories."

"And what do you see now? The active, attractive young girl aspires to go through life uncluttered.

"No need to have something to nervously wave — no need to be reminded that handbags are a throwback to the days when all females were considered just a degree above the beast of burden that the dominant male controlled." Another vocal opponent of the new feminism.

One keeps up their share of the conversation, limited only by imagination; it isn't considered good form to doubt the authenticity of any contributor. But when pinned down I receive one stock answer. "I'm just like you — I lie a lot, too."

A child is waiting

She needs a home

By CHARLOTTE LOBB

Melanesa's personality sparkles as much as her eyes do.

She is considered a leader in her four-year-old crowd. She will do quite well in nursery school this fall, according to her doctor. Three different foster homes and little permanency in her life have not disturbed Melanesa. But she would like to have parents all her own.

Melanesa and her imaginary friend play house, have tea parties, and care for her favorite baby dolls. Melanesa also enjoys pettable dogs and cats and helping her foster mother with the cooking.

"Melanesa is certainly not a behavior problem," says the social worker who is trying to find her an adoptive home. "She occasionally pouts a little but usually is willing to verbalize her anger."

Melanesa needs a relatively young black family to appreciate her. She gets along well with other children and would enjoy brothers and sisters. A bright, feminine child, Melanesa is expected to do well in school and in life if she can fine a permanent home.

If you have room for Melanesa and a very pleasant, pretend friend, call County of Los Angeles Department of Adoptions, (213) 338-8461 and ask for Mrs. Margaret Sikkens, at extension 271.

Welfare would fall if minimum wage increased

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Secretary of Labor Peter Brennan said Tuesday a boost in minimum wages would help get people off the welfare rolls.

"If we are trying to get people off welfare, the way to do it is to enable them to get up on their own two feet and make a decent living," he told a convention of barbers and cosmotologists.

Brennan said he disagreed with President Nixon's veto of the minimum wage law and would continue to work for an increase.

"I wanted a minimum wage law signed ... as a human being I could not see myself saying to the people on the bottom, "You should suffer a little longer because we are fighting inflation.'"

Brennan assumed the post of secretary of labor in February. He formerly was a member of a New York City and State Building and Construction Trade Council and is a painter by trade.

He told about 1,000 convention delegates at Caesar's Palace Hotel "people on the bottom needed help because they are caught up on the high cost of living ... people making a decent income are finding it ough, so what is the poor slob on the bottom going to do?

"I'm optimistic we will get a .new .minimum .wage .law. We are hoping for some compromise .between .Congress, Labor and the administration to have a bill passed to increase the minimum wage."

He said Nixon's veto of the minimum wage law primarily was based on other facets

Drake's landing in S.F. Bay?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) -- Historians have long argued about where Sir Francis Drake landed on the California coast in 1579 but one historian says a small rodent and a 380-year old chart may hold the answer.

Until now a brass plate found in 1936 was the only evidence of Frake's visit but historians never confirmed a landing site

Drake left England in 1577 to search for a Northwest Passage. After two unsuccessful years he and some 60 crew members looked for an anchorage to repair his leaky ship The Golden Hinde.

For decades school children were taught that Sir Francis anchored in Drakes Bay south of barren windy Pt Reyes in Marin County.

But Robert H Power of Vacaville who has studied the landing question for 20 years believes Drake sailed through the Golden Gate into San Francisco Bay 30 miles south of Drake's Bay.

In the summer issue of the California Historical Quarterly Power explained his theory using accounts written soon after the voyage and relating them to the geography and ecology of San Francisco Bay.

Power says that Drake while leading a party of men ashore to become acquainted with the land reported seeing thousands of small rodents they called "conies."

The conie was the California ground squirrel "which inhabits the warm hillsides and valleys around San Francisco Bay" not the colder damp area aroung Drakes Bay, Power says.

Drake also reported seeing "very large and fat Deere" which Power says were tule elk common to all of Marin County.

"The ecological phenomenon of the coexisting ground squirrels and elk not only supports San Francisco Bay landing but seemingly eliminates the pssibility that Drake explored the western portion of Marin County inland from Drake's Bay," Power said.

No first hand accounts of Drake's visit exist but Power says a Flemish map drawn in 1589 shows a California landing site named Nova Albion or New England.

The map "depicts an island closely paralleling a peninsula and a sharply devided bay" which resembles northern San Francisco Bay near Point San Quentin, Power says.

Because all of San Francisco Bay's features are not included on the Flemish map some historians say there is a similarity with Drake's Bay

But Power says the map was based on drawings made by someone sitting aboard the Golden Hinde who did not have the benefit of a bird's eye view to see coastal irregularities.

The journals also mention Drake's visits with the Miwok Indians who lived in redwood bark huts Such huts were those of the inland Miwoks who lived in the warmer interior where redwood trees were plentiful Power says.

The coastal Miwoks near Point Reyes lived in cave-like dwellings which were mentioned by an explorer 16 years after Drake's visit

The brass plaque found in 1936 is regarded by historians to be the oldest public document written in the English language in North America.

Power says it neither confirms nor denies either landing site

The plaque found by a young man looking for a spot to rest near Pt. San Quentin after changing a flat tire was signed by Drake who claimed the land for Queen Elizabeth I.

However a chauffeur William Caldiera said he found the plate three years ealier near Drakes Bay but had thrown it out his car window near Pt. San Quentin thinking it was worthless junk

"Competent historians say that's not history" Power says.

After 36 days Drake set sail his ship repaired The next stop was the Farallones a small group of islands 24 miles from the Golden Gate.

Power says he hopes his story is "the definitive article on where Drake landed in California'.'

Should the name Drakes Bay be changed? "I don't think so" Power says

Woman held 98 years in asylum

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — When Martha Nelson was four years old she was committed to a state mental institution and no one knows for sure why. Today, 98 years later, she's still there.

Martha, who celebrated her 102nd birthday in June at the Orient State Institute, was committed to the facility, then called the Columbus State Institute for the Feeble-Minded, on June 25, 1875.

"She never had a chance," said Dr. A.Z. Soforenko, newly appointed superintendent of the institution.

Although her records were destroyed in a fire in 1883 and no one knows for sure why Martha was committed, Soforenko said she probably was a victim of "eugenic alarm."

"During that time, it was believed if you moved feebleminded people out of a community and into an institution, it (feeble-mindedness) would never return to the community," Soforenko said, adding that such beliefs were common in the late 1800's.

"She apparently was trapped in that system. It was a wasted life."

Even though she "is quite coherent" for her age, Soforenko said she is better off spending her life at Orient.

"She has no relatives and has had no contact with anybody (except staff) for the last 78 to 80 years," he said. "Frankly, I don't think it would serve Martha herself to be transferred. She has her cottage, has her routine and knows the staff.

"My personal thrust," Soforenko added, "is to make damn sure it doesn't happen again."

Slayers of girl, 4, get prison sentences

REDWOOD CITY (UPI) — Two Los Angeles county men were sentenced to prison today for second degree murder in the shotgun-blast death of a four-year-old girl who was playing in the front yard of her Southern California home.

Donald Antello, 22, and Michael Ramirez, 18, both of Norwalk in Los Angeles County, were sentenced to five years to life in prison by Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Julious Leetham.

The trial had been moved here due to publicity.

"I don't believe the defendants intended to kill the little girl," Judge Leetham said. "They did not go out with that intent."

Antello claimed the defendants were cruising by car in the Hawaiian Gardens neighborhood with a stolen shotgun July 2, 1972, when a passenger bumped his arm and the gun went off, killing Joyce Ann Huff. The prosecution said Antello had fired the gun at a parked car a short time before and the girl was killed "because they wanted to shoot at something."

The defendants said they had gone to the neighborhood in search of rival youths they blamed for a murder charge against friends.

They were convicted Aug. 13 by a jury of six men and six women.

12 killed in torrential Japan rains

The heavy rainfall which passed its peak today left ten persons injured according to police.

An estimated 50 rescue workers toiled around the clock in a section of a Hokkaido town today to reach some 200 residents left isolated by the rains.

Bradley's girl gets probation

LOSANGELES (UPI) —The 28-year-old daughter of Mayor Thomas Bradley was fined $50 and placed on six months probation Tuesday after she pleaded guilty to a charge of being under the influence of a drug.

Phyllis Bradley was arrested Sept 17, 1972 by police officers who stopped her car and found what they said was a small amount of marijuana in her possession.

During her court appearance Tuesday before Municipal Court Judge Max B. Zimmerman she was served with four outstanding traffic warrants for parking violations She was released after posting $70 bail.

Betsy Ross ICE CREAM & COFFEE SHOPPE

MEETIN' & EATIN' AT BETSY ROSS

By Gene Neighbors

Hi, Neighbors,

There's chicken, and there's chicken. It depends upon the quality you buy and how you cook it for real crispy chicken. We use only the very best Honey-Dipt chicken. Try ours when you next come in for dinner.

A regular customer of Upland Coffee Shoppe since it opened GEORGE WEIDMAN came in and proudly displayed his Presidential Sports Award, received for his contribution in keeping alive the sport of fencing. It was signed by President Nixon, with presidential seal, and dated September, 1973. We're proud to relate such happy accomplishments.

Ice Cream, to be extra good, has to be served by nice friendly people in clean surroundings, so that every bite can be thoroughly enjoyed. So at Glendora Coffee Shoppe it was no surprise that LINDA SMITH hosted a birthday party on September 15th for her 6 year old daughter, KELLY. Joining the fun were LEEANN SMITH, KATIE, PATRICK, MARY and CHRISTINE CRANDALL; LAURA VANDANAKKER, JENNIFER and SHANNON O'BRIEN; CAROL LOVELL, PATRICK, GERALD and DAWN WAGNER; SUSIE McKERNAN, TERRI and TRACY PICKWITH; ALETHA ROGERS, and KENNY PREVICH.

On Sunday, September 9th, 35 persons attended a birthday party for ALAUMA COMSTOCK, 6, and her uncle, JOHN ALLRED. That same day 18 from GRACE BAPTIST CHURCH came in for Sunday afternoon dinner and took their usual spot in our Eagle's Nest! All this happened in Glendora, so if you want to get in on the fun, just bring your own friends and families and let us do all we can to make you comfortable. If you want an ice cream cone, a Washington Monument, our Yankee Doodle Dandy, or just a good hot cup of our special coffee, you are graciously welcomed.

Do you know how big a 16 oz. malt or milkshake can be? It's so big that we leave ours in the malt-can when we serve it to you, so you can have two full glasses of our thick creamy malts and shakes for only 60c.

Didja know that today is the last day of the Pick-A-Banana Split? That banana split will taste even better if you pay only 19c for it, or even 44c or 56c! Now ya know.

CALIFORNIA INDUSTRIAL JOBS RISE

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Jobs in manufacturing and construction were up substantially but employment in government was down during the first half of this year in California, the Finance Department reports.

Overall, the department concluded: "Economic expansion in California is continuing at a strong pace."

In a bi-monthly summary of the state's economic situation, released recently, the department said employment in durable goods manufacturing including aerospace and other industries were registering an increase of about 60,000 from levels last year.

Construction jobs were also maintaining a substantial increase, the survey said.

But it also said the service industries, which grew by 30,300 during 1972, have experienced a "gradual tapering" in growth since the start of the year. The July 1972 to July 1973 increase amounted to 42,400.

The survey said government employment "has slowed notably," due to cutbacks in federal civilian jobs and reduced growth in local agencies.

Government jobs in June totalled 1.55 million, compared to 1.52 million a year earlier. Total nonmilitary employment in the state as of June was 8.6 million, the report said, compared to 8.4 million a year ago.

The survey said increases in personal income have been "substantial so far this year."

Wages and salaries were reportedly about eight per cent above the pace of last year. The report said this was due largely to above average gains in manufacturing, communications-utilities and the finance industry.

The survey observed that monetary conditions were "effectively curtailing some demand" for new housing.

'This is fun'

Planetarium gives students feeling of participation

By KENNETH J. BRADDICK

BERKELEY (UPI) —Seven - year - old Rosie Fivan pressed a button on a compli-pressed a button on a complicated looking projector and the sun glided slowly between the giant stone columns of ancient Stonehenge.

"Wow!" she shrieked. "This is fun."

School was never like this, and neither was any planetarium she had been to before.

Rosie, in a red and white gingham top, blue jeans and red sneakers, was one of the visitors to the recently opened planetarium in the University of California's Lawrence Hall of Science.

Builders of the planetarium claim that it's unique in its mixture of intimate theater in the round and total participation in an exciting astronomical voyage of discovery.

Here, you don't pay your money and get lectured to the accompaniment of music that's supposed to give you the feeling of outer space.

Place for fun

This is where you have fun, ask anything you like, and do it yourself if you think the know-it operator is wrong.

In order to build the "participatory planetarium," director Alan Friedman picked up a used projector from UCLA, a dome that McGraw-Hill no longer wanted and some cash to build the wooden walls and cushion-covered benches.

Some students volunteers took a quick woodworking course to build the structure according to the plans of Dan Quan, 24, a graduate architecture student.

Quan said he visited several of the 12 planetariums in the San Francisco area, and found he didn't like any of them.

"What I wanted was to make it intimate, warm," he said. "This is for the kids. It had to be built so they could climb on the benches and jump up and down."

The planetarium is for all ages, but the emphasis is on children.

When little Rosie walked in with about a dozen other kids, she was handed a wooden marker that can be hung on a railing skirting the wall above the benches.

Operator John McCloud, 22, an astronomy major who puts in a lot of time at the planetarium, darkens the room and turns on the projector.

A color picture of Stonehenge, the massive stone structure on England's Salisbury Plains, encircles the wall. He briefly explains that Stonehenge dates back 4,500 years and that it probably was built by the Beaker people, so called because the only clue as to their origin are some clay beackers found by the columns.

Major

The children are asked what are the major astronomical events that bear on people's lives. It doesn't take much shouting, arguing, and guessing before the correct answer is given: the dates of the longest and shortest days of the year, marking changes in seasons that, it's explained, would be important for agriculture.

So to test the theory that Stonehenge, each of its four major arches made up two 50-ton stones capped with a 20-ton stone, was a massive calendar, the rise and set of the sun is put in motion.

"See if you can guess where the sun is going to come up," said the operator. The children jump on the benches and hang up their markers, some fighting for what they think are the best spots.

The sun rises near one of the markers and a young voice pipes up, "See, I was pretty close."

The faces are turned toward the heaven above them, eyes riveted to the progress of the sun, As it comes closer to the Western horizon, there's a scramble to change markers to show where it will set.

Not on spot

None of the markers are right on the spot. But a couple are close enough to touch off some raised voices about which was nearest.

The demonstration, the operator explains, tends to confirm the calendar theory.

Young Rosie can't remember everything about the demonstration, but she does recall that Stonehenge probably was a calendar somehow using the sun.

"I like this better than other places," she said, explaining it was her second visit. "It's fun."

After the demonstration, the kids get to take turns operating the projector, making the sun go the wrong way, looking for other planets, charting the course of planets at different times of year. The problem, if it is one, seems to be to get the children out.

Man sentenced in Agnew threat

ATLANTA (UPI)—A man who threatened the life of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew last May has been sentenced to two years in prison by a federal judge.

U.S. Secret Service agents said W. M. Phinazee telephoned the threat to them, and then waited to be arrested at an airport motel. Agents quoted Phinazee as saying he wanted to kill the vice president because he had not supported the Indians in the uprising at Wounded Knee, S.D.

U. of Utah studies 'ghetto living'

Poverty—no place to visit

SALT LAKE CITY — (NEA) — There was a touch of social voyeurism about the entire affair. Health professor and project director Marshall Kreuter said at the outset that he was distressed that his experiment might be construed as "playing zoo." He did not want either watchees or watchers to get the idea "us people up here are eyeballing those people down there."

But eyeballing, indeed, was the name of the game. And it was a game. Participants were assigned some fairly realistic experiences — (alcoholic wards, skid row flop houses, the Salt Lake County jail) — but except for the smells and visual impressions, few participants became absorbed enough to forget the realities of it all: Here they were, secure, mostly middle class people who might sympathize with the less fortunate but never really comprehend their wretchedness.

Some of the participants, actually, were downright dumb or even callous concerning the conditions of poverty. One 18-year-old lass, walking into a rescue mission dormitory, seeing rows of three-tiered bunks waiting for the evening's derelicts, gulped and said with feeling: "Oh, this is very nice." Another participant, on witnessing a drunken Indian with a massive goiter, cracked: "What's that on his neck? How ugly."

Rare glimpse

Yet for the drawbacks, and despite the collegiate-chic aura of the study (students described the project as, ugh, a "ghetto live-in"), the four-day, four-night workshop was valuable in that it was precisely voyeuristic. Dozens of haves took a peek at thousands of have-nots. The occasion afforded a rare glimpse at the desperation of the lowest forms of American poor — the transients, the derelicts, the nonresidents, the marginal workers, the ne'er-do-wells.

"We don't get the common poor," one skid row poverty worker explained to the workshop. "Most of the people here are nonresidents and do not qualify for welfare. If you live in a town and have hard times you generally know where to go for help. But what if you don't live in a town, don't live anywhere? What if you're a migrant or a passer through? A lot of these people can't even find the public urinals."

George Lewis was a fair example of the poverty worker's point. Married, three children, he recently left Texarkana ("There wasn't any work there") heading north. "I didn't have no money, only a couple of gasoline credit cards. So about the time we got to Wyoming my family was getting hungry as hell."

Lewis stopped at a Salvation Army in Green River and was told to move on. By the time he got to Casper, his exhausted children were crying.

"I went into another Salvation Army and they said they didn't have funds to feed travelers. I said, God man, then just feed my kids; my wife and I will stay in the car, just feed my kids. But they wouldn't."

The Lewis family traveled on to Salt Lake City hungry. "Many times we felt like stopping on the side of the road and killing a cow and eating the damn thing raw."

Fortunately, Lewis got a break in Salt Lake. His family was taken in by the town's sleazy side Rescue Mission. He found a job. Talked a realtor out of a home, with a delayed first month's rent. And is now apparently on the way to better living.

But the Lewis story could just as easily have gotten worse instead of better. Said Lauren Simms of the Salt Lake Rescue Mission: "George has a trade, he's a mechanic, so we had something to work with. A lot of others coming through don't have anything at all going for them. Thus, lacking skills and often ambition, America's transients too often get on a skid row cycle — and many of them, said Simms, can't get off.

Looking for work, or greener grass, or whatever, hundreds of thousands of Americans wander from town to town in an almost vectored course of futility. They arrive, say in Salt Lake City, only to immediately search out the slums.

Why the slums?

"Hell, I can't go downtown," said 29-year-old Jairo Hernandez, "the cops'll haul me in for sure. I ain't got no good clothes. I look like a bum. I don't even got a razor." Besides, Hernandez is Chicano, a handicap he believes "is like climbing a ladder with one leg. The only ones in these towns that'll accept me are here."

Even skid row does not always accept freely. Help and companionship in the slums are often attached to strings. In Ogden, Utah, for example, the rescue mission is pointedly more interested in men's souls than men's stomachs. The crusty mission director, Rev. Forrest Stinson, waving his hand over his wino flock, said:

Need God

"These men do not need jobs. They do not need money. They need God! If a man comes to me for help, he must accept God as his savior. That's what I'm interested in — getting them on the Road To Victory."

The road, then, is even tough in the slums. ("I hate to bury a wino," said Rev. Stinson, "what can you say over a bum?") But skid row is still the only place for many poor to go.

There, at least, the grubby and beaten-down transient can hope for work. Work, that is, of a peculiar sort. One Salt Lake Mission worker, Bill Byers, believes the skid rows of America run modern day "slave markets." Well meaning poverty agencies or church-affiliated groups scour the cities daily for job openings and then pass them along to the needy.

"But the jobs usually pay about $1.50 or $1.65 an hour, so a guy still can't see daylight. They work a couple days, or 10-12 hours, and they've earned maybe $15-16. Half of that goes for two night's lodging. A few bucks more for food. And considering where most of these people stay, they may get rolled for the rest. So they're right back where they started."

Succumb to booze

After a few years of this cycle, many wanderers succumb to the inevitable: booze.

"It works," sighed addiction specialist Jeffrey Simpson, "if they drink enough they soon forget how miserable they are."

Utah has at least 29,000 alcoholics at present, the nation more than seven million. Only a small percentage of the winos wind up on the street, but the statistics of those who don't do not detract from the fate of those who do.

Salt Lake's McArthur Park is crowded with drunks in the summer. They come to lay in the shade, to relieve themselves in the open-stall toilets, to be near their kind.

"I'm a goddamn drunk" said the Indian with the goiter to one workshop student, "anything else you want to know?"

The student nodded: How is it to love a life eternally intoxicated, to never have a home, to never change your underwear, to seldom rest the bottle long enough for even a shower? Pressed, the Indian indicated he was in no mood for an inquisition.

"What do you drink?" asked the student.

"Anything."

"Like what?"

"I like hair tonic best."

End of questions and of answers.

Society's answer

Eventually, of course, society comes to grips with the derelicts, the transients, the skid row wanderers. Mostly, society puts them in jail. Saturday night in Salt Lake City's slam is comeuppance time for the have-nots. Officers round the bums up, for such things as vagrancy, wobbling down the street, or overdue bills, then toss them in a clink not unlike many U.S. clinks — nicely designed and manicured on the outside, facing the public, but engineered only for filth and discomfort on the inside where the public cannot see.

The study group spent one night seeing what the public does not: .. drunk in a local tank screaming about crawling worms. A lad, arrested for sleeping nude in the park, telling everyone he was Jesus Christ. A young man laying on a cot, bleeding at the nose and forehead, mumbling about police brutality. A man in a sport coat implying he had been arrested in error, that he did not belong with the others. A mess in the corner, moaning, coming down from LSD.

If they had money, they could have legally bailed out. But they did not have money. That's part of the cycle. They were in because they did not have money, they stayed in because they did not have money.

"Money," said one, "that's the answer."

So they stayed all night, 15 men to 10 cell bunks, in a room that reeked of vomit, waiting until morning when they would be herded, unshaven and filthy, to a judge who only had to glance at them to know they were guilty of something.

"A lot of them plead not guilty," said a cop, "it doesn't help. The judge hasn't got time for that kind of crap. He runs them through as quick as possible. Anyway, they only get a few days. Then they'll be back out drinking again."

Cycle ends

The cycle, of course, does not go on forever. The realities of life break the ne'er-do-well's routine. The vagrant is run out of town, the marginal worker robs a store and is sent off to prison, the alcoholic continues his abuse, as addiction specialist Simpson says it, "until he quits drinking, goes crazy or dies." Were it not for this natural weeding (including, to be sure, men who get lucky, get jobs and get going) America's skid rows would be vastly larger blights.

As it is, the nation's skid rows are bad enough. And despite the transparencies of the ghetto live-in workshop, despite the Peeping Tom nature of such a peripheral study, several participants were shaken by what they witnessed.

One girl assigned to sleep in an alcoholic rehabilitation center woke up screaming at imaginary intruders. An older participant, approached in a "Soul Food" cafe by a prostitute with a missing tooth, ran out before eating his grits; another student, black, said he was denied the use of his hypertension pills during a night in jail:

"What if I would have really been sick and needed the pills? I could have died for all the cops cared. I bet people do die in there."

Indeed, people do die from neglect in jails, just as they do in slums. And seeing it, or at least sensing it, was the significance of the University of Utah's street workshop.

Pointing out that one in eight Americans is statistically living in poverty today (less than $4,100 income annually), and that many of them, such as transients, are outside the protection of society, workshop director Kreuter concluded such conditions are intolerable. Most live-in participants, once returned to the safety of their classroom, wholeheartedly agreed.

Sierra Club says gambling ruining Tahoe

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE (UPI) —Gambling casinos should be forced out of the Lake Tahoe Basin as a means of preserving its alpine beauty and the purity of the water, the Sierra Club contends.

"Gambling is an indoor enjoyment that can be done anywhere," a club spokesman told a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency hearing recently.

A casino spokesman held the club's idea wa

"We just know Tahoe is not the place for that type of activity," added Lloyd Krause, the conservationist club's Lake Tahoe Task Force chairman.

A casino spokesman held the club's idea was "ridiculous," adding that "gaming is our basic economy and it is what had made Lake Tahoe grow."

Both Krause and Roy Robinette of the League to Save Lake Tahoe opposed growth, with Krause holding that "new national legislation for the Tahoe Basin should in particular provide for relocating the casino industry somewhere else in Nevada's 110,000 square miles."

Krause suggested that the federal government reject highway grants, mortgage money and other forms of help as a means of preventing the lake area from becoming crowded.

Robinette recommended income tax cuts for owners who turn over private land for public use and the creation of a national land trust.

The agency took no immediate action.

Friends assail return of death penalty in state

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Friends Committee day denounced the new death penalty law signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan, calling it a "pitiful expression of primitive wishful thinking."

"The people of California and their legislators, frightened by rising violence in our communities, have been deluded into believing that executing a few murderers somehow will deter that violence," said Isaiah Meyer, chairman of the Friends Committee on Legislation of Northern California.

"Restoration of the death penalty ignores the experience of those states and countries which have meen without state executions, some for as long as 125 years, and whose ordinary citizens, policemen and prison guards live with less fear of violent attack than we do," Meyer said.

State sales tax to return to 5 cents for six months

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —In politically bewildering California, where the unusual is commonplace, the "yo yo" state sales tax is headed for a temporary spin downward on Oct. 1. Unless the Democratic-controlled legislature and Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan decide otherwise, it will snap back up again on April 1 permanently.

Confusing? Well, it is.

Basically, the sales tax increased from 5 to 6 cents on the dollar (6 ½ cents in San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District counties) because the governor and legislature couldn't agree by June 30 how to delay the additional level. This occurred in the face of an unprecedented $826 million tax surplus—a one-time stockpiling of funds accrued because of payroll withholding, welfare savings and a booming economy.

Originally, the extra levy was intended to help finance the state's new property tax relief and school finance program.

Then, the surplus emerged and virtually everybody agreed the tax increase was both unnecessary and unwanted.

Reagan wanted to use up about half the surplus by simply delaying the increase from July until February. This would leave most of the balance available for a 20 per cent rebate to income tax payers proposed by his tax limitation ballot initiative.

The legislature sent the governor a bill proposing both the July-February sales tax increase delay and a one-time 30 per cent income tax rebate limited to $200 per couple or $100 per individual.

Reagan vetoed the bill and the sales tax increased by a penny on the dollar. The action touched off an angry howl from taxpayers who swamped the state Capitol with bitter letters of protest.

When the legislature returned from its summer recess, it failed to overturn the gubernatorial veto and later voted overwhelming approval to a plan originally offered by Reagan June 29 before the recess.

It reduced the sales tax back to 5 cents on the dollar for six months starting Oct. 1 and granted income taxpayers a 20 to 35 per cent income tax cut on returns filed next April 15.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, a Democratic contender for governor and outspoken foe of Reagan's tax limitation plan, branded Reagan's June 29 proposal an offer to "help his wealthy friends."

When it finally came to accepting it last month, Moretti voted for the measure and termed it "far better" than the initiative "because it gives substantially more to the lower and middle income people of this state."

At a ceremony signing the tax reduction bill into law, Reagan scolded the legislature for "dragging its feet" and not accepting his plan earlier.

He proclaimed the reduction to be the "largest state tax rebate in the nation's history."

Some legislators and gubernatorial aspirants viewed the entire episode as repairing a mistake that should not have been allowed to occur in the first place.

Increased crime predicted if mental hospitals close

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Shutting down mental institutions will increase street crime by freeing patients who will commit disturbances, the Sheriff's Department told a state Senate hearing Monday.

Inspector Ralph C. Welch testified on behalf of Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess to the Senate Select Committee.

If plans to phase out state mental institutions are carried out, he said, "the effect...on law enforcement would be manifested in an apparent higher crime rate."

"It is Sheriff Pitchess' firm belief that if these patients are forced into the community, community pressure will mandate that action be taken to provide for their care," Welch said.

The former mental patients will thus wind up in jail, he said, aggravating an existing problem. Between 40 and 50 per cent of the 8,500 inmates at the county jail now are in "urgent need" of psychiatric help, he said.

Rock tossed onto freeway kills girl, 4; youths held

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Four youths ranging in age from 11 to 15 were booked on murder charges Sunday in the death of a 4-year-old girl killed by a rock thrown from a freeway overpass.

Police said Liyian Camacho was riding in a car with her parents on the Santa Ana Freeway Saturday when a rock crashed through the windshield and struck her on the chest. She died an hour later at White Memorial Hospital.

Police conducted a house-to-house search of the neighborhood near the Seventh Street overpass Saturday night and arrested the four juveniles, who were not identified. One of the youths admitted he had thrown the six-inch rock on a dare, police said.

The teen-agers were taken to Juvenile Hall and booked on suspicion of murder.

Melted brass sold for gold

LONDON (UPI) —With the price of gold going so high, why not try it, thought poultry dealer Victor F. Brotzman, 31.

So he and two other men took brass rods, melted them down into shiny gold-like ingots and sold them as fine gold to bullion dealer Johnson Matthey for $69,672, a court ruled today.

The court sentenced Brotzman to four months in jail and his accomplices to lesser terms for a fraud which Judge Alexander Karmel said was "clever because of its complete simplicity."

Bill bans big campers from fast lanes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill banning large campers roving homes and perhaps even semi trailer-trucks from the fast lanes of multiple-lane freeways was signed Monday by Gov. Ronald Reagan

Violators will be subject to citations beginning Jan. 1 when the bill (AB315) goes into effect.

Its sponsor Assemblyman John J. Miller D-Berkeley said the bill grew out of his driving experiences between the Bay Area and Sacramento "where those big trucks pull out in the fast lane and blind everybody"

Specifically the measure outlaws roving homes and all but the smallest camper rigs from the left lane of freeways where there are more than three lanes in each direction.

Miller says while semi trucks are not specifically mentioned in the ban —such language was amended out at the insistence of the teamsters —they are still included because of other technical definitions in the bill which deals with the placement of extra running lights

The lawmaker acknowledges there is dispute over the truck provisions.

The doctor comments

Physicians differ on heart treatment

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am caught between conflicting recommendations, medical and surgical, given by two famous medical centers about doing an angiogram and possibly coronary artery surgery. I am a 52-year-old university professor with mild angina attributed to the occlusion of one coronary artery. My weight is 148; fasting blood sugar, 108; cholesterol, 210; triglycerides, 195; and blood pressure, 138-85.

A treadmill test with an electrocardiogram (heart tracing) was diagnosed as positive, but another doctor stated that the findings were negative and the test should be repeated. It is not true that once you've been diagnosed as having a positive test that it does not change?

Still another doctor stated my condition was due to anxiety and prescribed Inderal and Sorbitrate, plus nitroglycerin for chest pain. Of course, I was a nervous wreck and had to take nitroglycerin for activites and emotions that I had never had prior to all this conflict. One doctor said my palpitations were due to my coronary artery occlusion, but after five months of medicine both of these conditions ceased entirely. Why? I thought that if an artery was filled with fat and lime it couldn't heal itself. If these heart conditions were caused by an occlusion, how could they stop?

Dear Reader — There is quite a divergence of opinion in interpreting electrocardiograms with exercise. I did a large amount of the early treadmill work in healthy young pilots. Many of them had electrocardiographic changes, but no heart disease. Such tests may unmask underlying heart disease, but a great deal of caution has to be used in interpreting such tracings. Electrocardiograms can change in response to exercise. Individuals in poor physical condition often have changes which disappear after their physical condition has improved.

It is possible after blockage of one artery for small connecting arteries to open and detour blood around the occlusion. In this way nature provides its own bypass without surgery.

Angiograms and surgery should be reserved for individuals with persistent chest pain, usually in the form of intermittent episodes, after a recognized heart attack. Coronary bypass operations or revascularization of the heart are not always successful and can impose their own problem. Just keep in mind that President Johnson had a severe heart attack at age 46 and lived almost 18 years after his initial episode.

You should do everything you can to minimize the fat underneath your skin. Follow the measures suggested for preventing heart disease, including diet, no smoking, and if your condition permits, begin a gradual increase in normal phusical activity. This means walking in your case.

Your palpitation may have improved because of your medicine and relief of concern about your problem, or an improvement of the circulation to your heart, which can occur in time if everything else is left alone. Just the fact that you have done this well this long, and assuming that your letter means that you no longer have symptoms, I would concur with the conservative approach — which means no surgery.

Experiment in awareness proves fatal

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) —A 46-year-old Pacifica man apparently trussed himself to a giant redwood and accidentally died during an "experiment in human awareness," authorities said Monday.

George S. Simon, a student of self-aware techniques, "just lost control of the situation," said Santa Cruz detective Sgt. Charles Brook.

Simon's scantily clad body was found last Saturday in a remote section of Big Basin State Park. His head pointed down a steep hill and a nylon cord linked his bound legs to the redwood.

A ten-inch cord knotted at both wrists allowed Simon to place his hands behind his back, said Brooks.

"He apparently fell and was unable to get back up," the detective said.

He said Simon apparently died from exposure while involved in the non-verbal communication and self-awareness experiment.

Tokyo raider will retire

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) —Col. James H. Macia Jr., the only member of Doolittle's Tokyo Raiders still on active duty, will retire from the Air Force next week.

Macia, a member of the security force at Kelly Air Force Base, was a B25 navigator-bombardier when Lt. Col. James H. Doolittle and 80 volunteers raided Japan with 16 planes on April 18, 1942, in the first attack by the United States on Japan during World War II.

Macia said he and his wife will remain in San Antonio following his retirement. He has two sons, both of whom are officers in the Army.

Gas dealer who didn't protest suffers loss

OAKLAND (UPI) —Texaco dealer Bob Anderson says a $2,000 rental van was destroyed at his station Monday because he did not participate in an area wide shutdown.

Anderson said the arson attack followed threats during the weekend after he failed to join a protest by dealers angry over Phase IV price controls.

The co-owner of the Al Costa Texaco station said the threats came from other independent dealers.

Despite the fire, Anderson opened his station for business Monday even though it only had 1,000 gallons of gas left.

"We have that thousand gallons and we're going to pump it dry," said Anderson.

Peering at the peerage

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Among the many things lost when the 13 revolting little American colonies severed the umbilical cord with mother England some 200 years ago, was the peerage—that colorful catalogue of dukes and earls that has so enhanced the rich traditions of the English people and kept the common chaps in their place for centuries.

England has no corner on the uncommon market of lordly titles, whether real or imaginary. Italy has its Knights of the Grand Cross and some titles dating back to the Roman Empire; France has buckets of counts, dukes, duchesses and marquises, the ancestors of whom panicked during the French Revolution and lost their heads completely.

Even West Germany has its minor nobility, and the Almanak de Gotha, the official royal registry book, is a best-seller. (My favorite title is Princess Margarita Von und Zu Hoenlohe-Langenburg. How'd you like to try to get that onto your driver's license?)

England, of course, that throne of kings, leads all of Europe in titles, and the annual honors roll call, Debrett's Peerage, is as fat as the Sunday L. A. Times, though the tight little island has been getting tighter in doling out peerages recently. What can you expect of Laborite and Conservative governments?

Great Britain still boasts 26 dukes, 200 earls, 495 barons and 132 vixcounts, similar to our vispresident. The Queen also hands out Knights of the Garter and Knights of the Thistle. I think I'd rather be a Knight of the Garter—sounds sexier.

Peering at the peerage has always been a favorite outdoor sport of the British commoners, most of whom are very poor. (There is no validity ot the British commonwealth.) And I believe that the United States of America would be richer and more colorful if we went back to titles and honors and nobility in name as well as fact.

Viscount John Dean. Sir Gordon Liddy. Prince John Von und Zu Ehrlichman. Earl Ervin.

And we'd have Sprio, Duke of Maryland, Baron H. R. Haldeman, and John Mitchell, Prince of Wails.

Kissinger could be a Knight Out.

I think it would be fun to go back to titles and orders and that medieval jazz. Take people's minds of W———.

I wouldn't mind being a Knight of the Garter, but I don't want anything I'm not entitled to.

Old-fashioned Blackwood

Put yourself in South's position. He is playing old-fashioned simple Blackwood and finds out that his partner holds two aces and a king. He is very likely to bid a grand slam on the theory that if North holds three to the queen in either minor suit or the queen of spades, seven will make easily. In addition, if North's spades are headed by ace-king-jack, there will be a finesse for seven.

Now suppose he is playing the above modification. He knows that North is unhappy about his hand in general. He finds out that North holds the ace-king of spades and ace of hearts. Those are the only aces and kings that South is not looking right at.

Clearly North wouldn't be unhappy about his hand if his spade suit were headed by ace-king-queen. Probably he wouldn't be unhappy if he had three to the queen in either suit.

Therefore, South decides to just bid six. Of course, he bids it in no-trump. He counts the same 12 sure tricks in either no-trump or hearts except that not only does no-trump count 10 points more but it is safer. Nothing can be ruffed.

Finicky eaters

Sea World's food bill for week is $5,000

SAN DIEGO (UPI) —Housewives bemoaning the high costs of feeding their families can be thankful for one thing—they don't have to feed five killer whales and 4,000 other assorted birds, fish, reptiles and mammals.

That is the $5,000 task facing Sea World every week. Furthermore, while homemakers can provide casseroles or meat and potatoes with the trimmings for the most part, the brook at Sea World contains finicky eaters who require special diets. But at least there is no cooking.

The California sea otters, for instance, demand squid or whole crab. Once in a while, they are even given live clams, live crab and abalone. Visitors can watch them floating bellyup breaking open the shellfish with a rock on their chest. Each consumes one-third of its body weight daily—up to 20 pounds of food.

Among the easiest to feed are the dolphins and whales because that happens during their performances. The five killer whales, each weighing about 4,700 pounds, share about 1,000 pounds of mackerel and herring daily, and Each dolphin gets 20-30 pounds of fish a day.

On the other hand, the infant walruses receive a formula of whipping cream, vegetable oil, minced clams and liquid vitamins from hand-held bottles.

John Carlton, one of the 30 attendants involved with feeding, is in charge of the octopi and moray eels. He dangles frozen squid in the water at the top of their tanks after cautiously removing the lids. lids.

"Some fish won't feed unless they think its a live meal they're catching themselves,' ' he said, explaining' the wiggling motion he gives the squid.

"Sometimes the octopus has his tentacles all over the top of the tank and we have to keep pushing him back in. Other days, he seems quite uninterested in food."

In the large aquariums which house numerous fish of varying sized the problem could be difficult, but senior aquarist Ray Keyes has worked out a solution.

He feeds the big fish such as 300-pound grouper and jewfish first with mackerel and herring. All he has to do is dangle his hand in the water and they come right up.

"They are smart and they are friendly," he said. "I was in the tank this morning cleaning the glass and they came right up to me as if interested in what I was doing."

When the big fish are filled, Keyes throws in shrimp tails, smelt, clams and squid for the medium-sized eaters. The result is a wild churning as the fish battle for the morsels, but Keyes said there is enough for all.

They eventually finish and Keyes then tosses in more food which drifts slowly to the smaller fish, who remain on the bottom to avoid the fighting.

Keeper Bill Ervin is a bit wary of his charges, a group of alligators. He wears long, heavy boots and uses long tongs to offer the reptiles their daily fish.

Relies on visitors

Sea Wolrd relies on visitors to feed some of the clan but not the alligators.

Although most of the food fish comes from a fishery firm and from the Great Lakes, Sea Wolrd does grow some food of its own. It is called "plaster of paris food block" and simulates coral for the smaller tropical fish. It contains dehydrated ground spinach, trout chow, vitamins and pigment supplements.

Incidentally, the smallest eaters never exceed one inch in length. They are neon eels and tetra and are fed brine shrimp and a type of powdered fish food called tetrament.

Council urges U.S. boycott of Sears

The request was forwarded Monday by the State Labor Federation for submission to the AFL-CIO national convention next month.

Here's how 'plumbers' got name

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The White House Special Investigations Unit got its nickname "the plumbers" because it was located in the general maintenance area of the building, E. Howard Hunt Jr. testified today.

Hunt told the Senate Watergate committee that David R. Young, a co-director of the unit, put a sign "Plumber" on the door of room 16 in order to divert attention from the unit.

The name stuck.

President Nixon himself referred to "the plumbers" in his May 22 statement on Watergate and national security.

One bit of unconfirmed lore has it that Young informed his grandmother that he was working as a White House Plumber, and that she responded, "Your grandfather would have been so proud; he was a plumber, too, you know."

Claremont okays commercial zone

CLAREMONT — Despite protests from two of the property owners in a proposed annexation, the City Council Tuesday night by a 3-1 margin pre-zoned the greater part of 40 acres as major commercial.

The 40 acres are part of a larger 52-acre annexation lying north and east of the Clarion Place-Rockford Drive neighborhood.

Councilwoman Claire McDonald voted no on the motion and asked for a delay of two weeks until the matter could be discussed further.

The city's General Plan calls for a major regional shopping center east of the Clarion Place-Rockford Drive neighborhood to be reached by Aurora Drive which would intersect with a future Grand Avenue to be built between Base Line Road on the north and the northerly extension of Claremont Boulevard as its extends northeastward from Foothill Boulevard to Padua Avenue.

Arthur Steffen Jr., representing Walter Fleming who owns the northerly 10 acres of the 40 which were pre-zoned, urged that the city obtain an unbiased feasibility study for a shopping center.

"This particular zoning does constitute strip zoning," Steffen said. "This is in effect, a confiscation of Mr. Fleming's property. You are impairing his rights as a property owner because you are splitting his property. You should zone all his property the same."

Steffen explained that Fleming owns 20 acres in all, the easterly 10 not being included in the proposed Stover annexation.

Stanley Clark of San Marino, owner of the 10 acres in the annexation south of Fleming's property protested that "a major shopping center doesn't add anything to the quality of Claremont. Do you really need money that badly? Such a center brings traffic. It brings noise and it brings problems to the nearby neighborhoods."

Clark said that he sees "no conceivable possiblity of a shopping center going in on the 40 acres in the next five years."

Noting that development of the shopping center is tied to the building of the Foothill Freeway north of the annexation, Clark said that there is a large group of people in Claremont who don't want the freeway to go through.

Clark also owns the eight acres housing the Claremont Tennis Club to the east of his 10 the city is proposing to annex, and he said that high-class $40,000 townhouses on the 10 acres "would add much more to the quality of life than Bullocks. It may be nice to shop there but not live next to."

"I don't think sales tax revenue should be a major goal for a beautiful city such as Claremont," Clark said.

Clark commented that the city might annex his tennis club, but he didn't like the city dragging him into the city by his heels.

"I don't want to be zoned major commercial," he said. "Why should I come into the city? What will it do for me?"

Twenty acres south of Clark's is owned by the Stover family who asked for the annexation.

Steffen told the council that the proposed area, with or without annexation a freeway, will not support a major shopping center "of the magnitude of which you plan. Under today's standards the minimum site should be 150 to 200 acres."

William Peck, representing the Immaculate Heart Sisters who own 10 acres south of the Freeway, right-of-way, and whose property is part of the annexation, old the council that his clients don't want to be annexed as commercial, and that they would favor single-family residential or townhouses.

Planning Commission Chairman Enid Douglass suggested to the council she wouldn't like to see the possibility of dual zoning discussed with or without the freeway.

"I would like to have some options," she said.

Major Craig McManigal said he felt there is a certain amount of work that can be done in restudying the General Plan which was passed in 1970. The council and Planning Commission will hold a study session Oct. 2.

Clark also protested the proposed future alignment of Claremont Boulevard as it bends northeastward to intersect with Padua Avenue at the southeast corner of his Claremont Tennis Club property.

Clark said that he felt the street needn't curve northward so sharply but that it should meet Padua Avenue 100 feet south.

Clark explained that in order to develop his westerly 10 acres he would like to extend Aurora Drive eastward to meet Padua Avenue. He said that presently a fire road runs about 120 feet north of his south property line, and he would like to dedicate it as a county road. He said such a road was killed by a recommendation from a member of the city staff.

Clark said that he sees no hope for a major center within the next 15 years, and complained that it costs him $1,000 a month to hold onto the property. He said that he needs access to develop the land as townhouses after the tennis club fills up.

Despite Clark's recommendation, the council by a 4-0 vote approved a future alignment of Claremont Boulevard north of Foothill Boulevard.

Deputy City Manager Norman King, filling in for the absent City Manager Keith Mulrooney, explained that if Claremont received the average city sales tax the city could afford to drop the tax rate by half, or about $500,000, or put it into parks and recreation.

"The city can't afford to turn down a regional shopping center," he said. "You can't ignore the 1 per cent sales tax or the motel and hotel tax."

He said that a negative decision on pre-zoning the Stover annexation would be a watershed decision on the General Plan adopted nearly five years ago. "We would squander the meager resource we have," he concluded.

Chino schools acquire two more buildings

CHINO — The school board here took care of several routine items during its Tuesday night meeting.

The Chino schools acquired two new buildings with board acceptance of a relocatable building at Buena Vista High School and the agreement to purchase a quonset hut from Vanderberg Air Force Base.

The relocatable at Buena Vista, the continuation high school, was acquired through a lease-purchase agreement with Huwin Corp. Board member Eva Weiszbrod visted the school Tuesday afternoon to check out the new building which houses three classrooms.

She commented that the interior possesses an "atmosphere conducive to learning. Comments from Harvey Holland (Buena Vista principal) are that students from reacting in a positive way."

"To date, they're working beautifully," added Holland. "The students have a feeling of being closer to the teachers than in other rooms . . . The interior decoration has made them more comfortable and relaxed and they're doing more work."

The board agreed to purchase the quonset hut, measuring 40 by 100 feet, for $50 from the educational surplus of the Air Force after a question of expense was cleared up.

Although the purchase price was minimal, the labor and transportation of the building from Lompoc was $1,500; and the concrete floor installation and labor to reconstruct the interior was an additional $4,000.

The total cost was therefore $5,500, approximately $1.39 per square foot.

Augustine Tapia questioned the expense involved and asked whether it would be cheaper to construct a building on district grounds.

Board member Al McCombs expressed doubt that such a building of similar proportions could be built for $5,500. However, he continued, he did wish to know what the building would be used for.

A warehouse extension, came the reply from Supt. Royce Lapp. He added that the present warehouse is "operating very inefficiently because we do not have ample room." The hut would be located in the area just east of the existing bus garage off Telephone Avenue, north of Riverside Drive. The building would run north and south, just behind the paint shop, said Lapp.

"I don't think there's any way in the world to construct a building of this square footage for $1.39 a foot," said board president Charles Smith.

In other matters, the board:

— Accepted a report from Al Searfoss, assistant superintendent of business services, that a preliminary presentation would be given Nov. 9 on the master planning of the district. The first information would be ready for mailing to the state by the first week of December, estimated Searfoss.

— Received a report from Lapp that the district administration had been unable to locate a cost savings incentive plan from another school district. He stated that the administration was now seeking copies of plans already established in private business and governmental agencies and would adapt these to the provisions of the educational code." Copies have already been received from General Dynamics and General Telphone of Pomona.

— Heard a brief report on the student control policy now being re-written. Searfoss stated that a new committee of parents, administrators, board members and Certificated Employes Council members had been formed.

— Set Lapp's salary for this academic year at $31,000; and the salaries of both Searfoss and McMurtry at $25,650.

— Extended the student crossing guard program to Newman School.

Charity to get bulk of big estate

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) —The bulk of $80 million estate of Mrs. Geraldine Rockefeller Dodge will go to charity instead of her already rich relatives.

The will, entered in probate court Monday, entrusted the money to the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation which will be established with offices in Madison and Chatham Townships.

Mrs. Dodge's relatives were excluded in the will because they had been provided for in previous Rockefeller wills, the document said. She was the niece of the late John D. Rockefeller.

The will said that the foundation provide funds to the Madison police and fire departments and ambulance squad and help establish a Madison Health Center to house the health department.

School board okays recreation financing

By PHYLLIS CANNON
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — The Pomona school board, in a joint afternoon meeting with the City Council, Tuesday unanimously agreed to supply roughly one-third of the community recreation budget for this fiscal year by using its community service tax funds.

The budget for a program extending from Oct. 1 to July 1 totals $473,526. The school district will be contributing $155,965; the city, $317,571.

The motion to accept the budget as presented by recreation director Jack Hoxsey was made by school trustee Ken Pine and seconded by trustee Roy O. Day.

Approval of the budget, Hoxsey said, means the city's recreation program on Oct. 1, or shortly thereafter, will be expanded to include programs at neighborhood parks, all school sites in the Pomona district and a specialty program to develop special interests through recreational and lesiure time activities.

It also will include a wide recreational sports program and insure the general services program to provide necessary services to operate recreation department programs.

Mayor Ray J. Lepire suggested near the end of the 60-minute discussion that a subcommittee with two members from each group be established to go to work in January on determining total costs of the recreation program.

Much of the discussion centered on the point that the $473,526 budget for fiscal 1973-74 covers personnel and operation only and does not include maintenance, custodial service, utilities or repair of city or school properties used in recreation department activities.

Lepire reminded the two elected groups present and their respective staffs that this was their fourth joint meeting in five months. "I'm very happy with it," he remarked.

He asked the two staffs to meet and set a date for the next joint meeting.

Hoxsey said that in all the years the school district had cooperated in funding the recreation program by about a third of its annual cost, maintenance never had been figured into budgets.

Rather, he said. each body had picked up those costs through other budget categories.

School Supt. Robert E. Wentz said he felt a better way would be to determine those costs and show them in the budget "to let the taxpayer know the entire cost of recreation."

Garrett C. Nichols, assistant superintendent of business services, said his department could come up with more sophisticated cost data as the year progresses to determine such things as cost of electricity per hour for future use.

Hoxsey said 80 per cent of the recreation department's budget goes to salaries.

Councilman Ben Ochoa agreed that total costs, including all maintenance, should be determined, studied and perhaps projected five years to aid in planning.

In seconding Pine's motion, Day said he wanted to emphasize that possibly the program as submitted by Hoxsey is not perfect and should be refined as time goes by the city fathers and the school board. "But, right now action is important," he said.

With the passage of Senate Bill 90 early this year, the school district withdraw from its agreement with the city to sponsor by one-third the recreation program.

Senate Bill 90 deleted the community service tax through which funds had been accrued in the past.

However, a trailer bill, Assembly Bill 1267, followed Senate Bill 90 and reinstated the community service tax which is a permissive tax.

It allows the school district to levy a 10 cent per $100 assessed valuation without voter approval. This year the community service tax will bring in approximately $225,000 to the school district.

State law limits expenditure of these funds to three uses: noontime supervision on school grounds, community recreation and community use of district facilities.

At the school board meeting Tuesday night, chairman James Bell reported on the board's afternoon action and asked help from the community in two areas.

"There is a growing trend toward vandalism in facilities used for recreation. We're going to ask the general public to help curb this trend.

"And second, if the school district provides one-third of the recreation budget, we need from the public some input on whether the programs offered are satisfactory and beneficial.

"For example, if a program you or your child attends is very bad, or very good, we would like to hear from you. This would be helpful to us if we are to share in the funding of the recreation program."

Pine told those at the board meeting the recreation budget approved Tuesday afternoon would restore programs at all elementary, junior high and high schools.

"We've moved a couple of steps forward in identifying the goals we'd like to achieve in the community and establishing criteria for measuring our achievements,' said Pine.

"We're going to try to provide the best kind of program we can for our community."

Reader gets the point about acupuncture care

An article on acupuncture appeared in the Progress-Bulletin recently. It told of using acupuncture as a possible cure for drug addiction and heavy smoking.

Could you tell me where I would go to get such treatment? — R. L., Pomona.

The Los Angeles Medical Group at 1245 Glendon Ave. in West Los Angeles is treating drug addicts and smokers with acupuncture and is just beginning to apply the method to overweight problems.

Edward Howard, administrator, claims "excellent results" in treatment of drug addiction and smoking. He says the medical doctors making up the group want to treat more cases before they publish their findings.

Acupuncture continues to be controversial, as noted in a Progress-Bulletin editorial on Sept. 17. Two research psychologists, Dr. John F. Chaves and Dr. Theodore X. Barber of the Medfield Foundation in Massachusetts, say possibly psychological, as well as other factors — rather than insertion of needles into the skin of a patient — relieve the pain.

Acupuncture in drug addiction, however, is being studied intensively by the Department of Emergency Medicine at the USC School of Medicine. The USC Acupuncture Study Group first became interested in using acupuncture for dental anesthesia in addicted young adults.

We rented a house on June 15, paying $150 for a month's rent plus a $50 cleaning fee.

My folks were sick, since then my father has passed away. I explained to the landlord that I had to move from Pomona to Riverside to take care of them.

He said he wouldn't return our $50 until he rented the house. He rented it July 19 and the people didn't move in until July 26. He said we wouldn't be getting the $50 back because the house had stayed vacant too long.

I realize we weren't able to give him much notice but the house was in A-1 shape when I left it. The yard was full of weeds when we moved in and it took days to get it looking decent. — Mrs. C. B., Riverside.

We got in touch with your former landlord. He brought to our attention a term of your rental agreement which calls for 30 days' notice by either party for termination of tenancy.

He said he received only a seven-day notice that you were going to move on July 15.

He sent us a copy of a rental agreement showing that the new tenants didn't start paying until July 25. He charged you the $50 for rent due him for the 10 days between July 15, the day you left, and July 25.

TOURIST TREAT The traveling Le Vesques — Darryl, Carol and veteran trailer rider, Michelle—stopped a lot of traffic on their recent 12-day, three-state tour down the Pacific Coast. Next year they plan to capture the fancy of canadian motorists with their novel tandem tourer.

On a bicycle built for 2½, plus camping gear

Cycling family a tourist attraction

By PAT SPENCER
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Darryl and Carol Le Vesque, along with their daughter, Michelle, proved to be one of the top tourist attractions along the Oregon and California coasts earlier this month.

Le Vesque, 26, a customer service representative for Southern California Edison Co., said he and his family got some 15 or 20 requests a day from motorists wishing to photograph them as they traveled on their 12-day trip from Kelso, Wash., to Ft. Bragg.

What stopped the traffic was the Le Vesques' vehicle: a tandem bicycle with a special trailer that held little Michelle, 2½, and some 70 pounds of lightweight camping gear.

The Le Vesques of Ontario had originally planned to cycle all the way to San Francisco, but rain cut the trip short by about three days.

They averaged anywhere from 20 to 81 miles a day depending on the terrain, stopping only for meals, short rests and overnight camping.

The cost of the entire trip, which included three nights in motels and a train trip up to Washington, was about $300, Le Vesque said.

They experienced no major problems with their 39-pound English touring tandem during the trip, but the trailer hitch broke on an Oregon bridge. A safety chain prevented the mishap from turning into a tragedy, however.

Perhaps the biggest problem was the rain, which slowed the trip. Le Vesque said it took 3½ hours to cover the 45-mile trip up and over the Pacific Coast Range.

Motorists, for the most part, were considerate, Le Vesque said, but logging trucks, due to their size and length, cramped them on the raod.

Despite the difficulties, Le Vesque would like to try the trip again when he can take more time. Before that, however, he plans to take another two-week tour next year, probably in Canada.

Darryl, a Cal Poly accounting senior and a director of the Claremont American Youth Hostels organization, has been touring for many years.

Last year, he and Michelle toured from Monterey to San Diego. The trip give Michelle a 4,000-mile entry on her touring log since the age of three months.

Although it's getting a little difficult for her to keep from fidgeting in her car seat in the trailer, frequent rest stops and morning and afternoon naps made the northern coast trip "easy for her," said Le Vesque.

It was a first for his wife, Carol, 25. Although she had made several short overnight trips, the Washington-California run was her initial extended overnight tour.

"She's a cyclist because her husband is," said Le Vesque. "She enjoys it most when it's over."

The Le Vesques agree they'd like to try the same trip again if they could take a little more time. Before that, however, they plan another two-week tour next year, most likely in Canada.

Future plans include a possible trip to England. And, having virtually done the West Coast, there's still the Atlantic Coast yet to be run. As Darryl comments, "we're a cycling family from the word go."

First Federal official ends exec training

ELAINE KUHN

POMONA — Elaine Kuhn, assistant vice president of Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association, recently graduated from the School for Executive Development conducted at Washington University.

The school, opened to savings and loan personnel, is sponsored by the American Savings and Loan Institute, in cooperation with the university.

Miss Kuhn, who serves as branch division training officer, is the first woman from the Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association to graduate from the school.

She was one of 90 students selected from applications across the nation. The two-week course is offered to persons in managerial and supervisory positions in savings and loan associations.

Council rezoning eases way for 100-unit condominium

POMONA — If Thomas W. Scott, a Pasadena builder, wants to buy the lot on the southwest corner of Seventh Street and Park Avenue, he probably will be able to build his 10-story condominium complex across the street from the Civic Center.

The City Council approved Scott's request Monday night for a zone change on a parcel of land in the block running south of the Barrister building to Seventh Street from office-professional-civic and transitional to office-professional-redevelopment.

The council also has set a hearing for Oct. 15 to consider closing Sixth Street between Park and Parcels in preparation for the 100-unit development.

But the conditional use permit for the construction itself may not come until Scott buys up the corner piece.

That, in essence is the attitude of the Pomona Planning Commission whose members told Scott at a hearing Sept. 12 that he didn't have enough land for the 100-unit development.

They suggested that he either cut the proposal to 80 units, or buy the corner parcel, and then continued the hearing for two weeks to see what he could do. That hearing will resume tonight.

Scott has asked the city for a number of variances, contending that he intends to build a very high quality complex ranging in price from $30,000 to $42,000 each, suitable to executives working around the civic center.

Bank officer graduates

THOMPSON ELLIOTT

POMONA — A local bank official has completed three years' advanced banking and management studies with graduation from the Pacific Coast Banking School in Seattle, Wash.

Thompson A. Elliott Jr. received a diploma from the school in August. He is an assistant vice president with Security Pacific Bank's Special Training Northwestern Division Operations Department.

Thompson attended the school for a two-week session this summer, along with 631 students from upper-middle management levels. The full schedule of daily classes was presented by a faculty of educators, economists, bankers, and specialists from across the United States. Graduation ceremonies were held on campus at the University of Washington, with 149 commercial bankers and 33 trust officers in the graduating class.

Senator would end foreign police aid

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., is at it again, attempting to end American aid and instruction to foreign police. He argues our assistance unavoidably invites criticism from those who seek to identify the United States with every act of police brutality in countries where the program operates.

This is cowardly retreat. In many countries police have little regard for human rights. If U.S. economic aid is to mean anything, and if we are to help foreign developing countries in ways which will make for a world of the type in which we and almost all other human beings wish to live, then we must use whatever influence we can on national police departments.

This is a slow, difficult task. The way to measure progress is to note here and there a shift in police attitude.

Begin with Chief Isadoro Relative, Nabua Police Department, the Philippines, a graduate of the U.S. International Police Academy. On his wall is his objective (taken from AID), "To the man on the street, the police are the government. When the police are fair, the government is just. When the police are competent and compassionate, their government is efficient and humane."

Some 7,500 foreign police have been trained in the academy. Since 1954 the Office of Public Safety has given assistance to 52 countries. Eighteen nations now receive this aid.

There have been some modest results in curbing corruption. In Zaire, 11 out of the top 14 police administrators are graduates of the AID International Police Academy. Early this year these officials issued three direct anti-corruption warnings, then took several hundred offending policemen to a remote area in the bush where they worked eight hours a day in the boiling sun building a village and spent the evenings at lectures on honesty.

In the Philippines, OPS helped develop guidelines for a police inspection-audit division. In Laos, OPS assisted in creating an inspector general office. With OPS assistance, several Latin nations have adopted inspection systems designed to weed out corrupt officers.

Ten years ago, the police approach to demonstrators and rioters in many countries was fixed bayonets. Non-lethal tear gas is being substituted in AID-assisted nations.

In Ecuador's El Oro Province, when a student strike escalated into violent mob action, the restraint of the National Police was so marked the students themselves published a handbill praising the officers for their attitude.

In Jamaica, Guatemala, Colombia and Venezuela, recent demonstrations and riots have been controlled more effectively with less injury and loss of life to rioters and demonstrators than in the past.

Improved police behavior in the questioning of suspects has not been as pronounced. But as one adviser put it, more local police now realize "a chip of paint or a fingerprint is a more reliable piece of evidence than a worthless confession beaten out of a suspect."

American advisers and instructors make suggestions; they cannot order other nations to change their police methods. There is heavy dependence on the indirect approach. It has been felt that if the police could be encouraged to go strongly into civic action, this mingling of officers with the population would improve police attitudes.

In Zaire, police have started baby clinics. Philippines police have established youth opportunity programs. In Ecuador, new rural police buildings include centers for educating local illiterates; police dentists man clinics for rural children. Border patrol police in Thailand instruct hill tribesmen in crop rotation and the proper use of fertilizer and have erected hundreds of simple one-room rural schools.

None of this is meant to imply police departments of the developing world have suddenly become professional, nonpolitical, uncorruptible, with scrupulous regard for human rights. But indications are that changes are being made.

Our role in Chile

Out of the carnage and political convulsions of the military overthrow of Chilean President Salvador Allende came one bit of good news, at least. The United States, forewarned of the coup, wisely decided "at the top level" to keep hands off.

It is, of course, distressing that another duly elected government in South America has failed, particularly one that had been in the democratic fold for years. Latin America needs stability, not revolution, and Chile has been one of its most stable and prosperous nations. But for us to have taken a position at this time would have been the height of diplomatic folly.

Allende was no sweetheart. Although he had expressed concern for the welfare of the people, particularly the middle class, his utopian leftist administrators had turned reform into ruin for those people. In the ruthless drive toward a far-out liberal regime under their tight control, they succeeded in destroying much of Chile's economy.

Now they are the "outs," and will be plotting to overthrow their overthrowers. The future of Chile seems bleak, even though it is reported the military coup had the strong support of the working class, and promises a return to true democracy.

For the Chilean people we must have sympathy. For their government we must adopt a wait and see policy before we involve ourselves too deeply.

Nixon zeroed in on Sen. Muskie

WASHINGTON — The chief target of President Nixon's political espionage before the 1972 conventions was Sen. Ed Muskie, D-Me., whose private conversations were often reported back verbatim to the White House.

The spy reports, prepared by newsman Symour Freidin, who was identified only as "Chapman's Friend," portrayed Muskie as a frenzied campaigner who berated his staff and bellyached to his Senate colleagues.

"He made 'herculan efforts' to control himself to avoid tantrums," stated an Oct. 18, 1971, report. Yet the following February, Freidin reported that Muskie had to be restrained by his staff from barging into the offices of New Hampshire publisher William Loeb and "hauling him out by the scruff of the neck."

Freidin used his newspaper credentials to gain access to Democratic sources and then reported their off-the-record confidences to President Nixon's political mentor, Murray Chotiner. Confidential copies were distributed to then-Attorney General John Mitchell and White House staff chief H. R. Haldeman.

'Foul temper'

As early as April 6, 1971, Chapman's Friend reported on a stormy secret session of Muskie's planning staff. "Muskie was in foul temper. . .," declared the spy report. "He kicked things off by charging that his special entourage 'didn't know a g--d---thing about politics. . . ."

The report quoted Muskie as complaining: "All I get from you people are excuses! You're not on the ball!" He questioned which team his advisers were on — "mine or someone else's?"

This brought a sharp rejoinder from his top adviser, Berl Bernhard. "Ed," he asked, "do you want me to turn in my suit? If that's your intention, say so."

The report claimed Muskie dismissed talk of resignation but added plaintively: "You know how edgy a man in this situation can get. . . ."

A few days later, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield was quoted in the press as saying Muskie was "slipping" in the presidential standings. Freidin gave the White House a report on Muskie's subsequent encounter with Mansfield.

Muskie's complaint

"Mike, it seemed to us," complained Muskie, "that you were cutting ground from under me. This isn't being equal to everyone; I come out less equal."

Mansfield, according to Freidin, responded: "I'm neutral in this business. Everything that comes up shouldn't get under your skin, Ed. There's a long way to go."

Freidin quoted Muskie's press aide, Dick Stewart, as telling him on April 21, 1971: "This setup, as I find it now, is a can of worms. Everybody seems to be doing his own thing . . . Muskie makes a date with someone. He either forgets it, doesn't tell anybody else and someone gets damned mad, cooling his heels."

This was confirmed by Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., who told Freidin: "Ed's got all kinds of problems. Staff is a big one for him . . . I guess that one of Ed's biggest worries is who is really working for him or against him in his own staff."

'Shmuskie'

Chapman's Friend also reported that the AFL-CIO had turned against Muskie. The spy reports contain this contemptuous comment from the AFL-CIO's Jay Lovestone:

"Shmuskie finished himself for good with the Old Man (George Meany). Meany never cared for him anyway . . . Muskie got high and mighty. He'd make his own decisions and choices, he told our people. So we know what that meant. We took off all the wraps . . . Shmuskie got what was coming to him."

The reports depict Muskie as growing increasingly frustrated over his political misfortunes until he finally exploded. The cause was a derogatory item about his wife, Jane, in William Loeb's Manchester, N.H., Union Leader. Afterward, Freidin relayed these off-the-record comments from Berl Bernhard:

"Ed blew his stack. He called Loeb every name under the sun. He was all for going into the office and hauling him out by the scruff of the neck. There had to be lots of talking to get him to simmer down . . . .

'Stewed and stormed'

"Even after he was convinced he could not roar into the Union Leader offices, he stewed and stormed. We decided after lots of phone talks that it was best for him to do the outside-the-building thing. But I don't believe any of us foresaw that he would become as emotional as he did."

Freidin flew to Maine in May 1971 to dig up possible dirt on Muskie from his four married sisters. "They live in a close radius near Mama Muskie," Freidin reported to Chotiner. "They are devoted to her and, in the course of their meal, spoke much more of Mama than they did of their famous brother."

One of the sisters, apparently, could use financial help. Chapman's Friend talked to Muskie's mother about it. "I wouldn't think of asking nor would my children . . . ," she said. "My other daughters and I suggest to the whole family that if anyone should ever need help, we all pitch in. That doesn't single out anybody. Nobody has ever asked."

THE LIGHTER SIDE

There's no demand for politicians

BY DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Let's see. Fuel oil, natural gas, electric power, gasoline, paper, anti-freeze, lumber, bathroom fixtures, soybeans, anchovies. Does that about cover the current list of shortages?

Probably not, scarcities are developing so fast it's difficult to keep the inventory up to date.

By the time you read this, there may be a dearth of manhole covers, swizzle sticks, boar bristles, eyebrow pencils and I don't know what else.

The present period of mushrooming shortages could even include a shortage of mushrooms. Or possibly this:

Washington —Federal election officials warned today the nation is facing a severe shortage of presidential candidates.

Indications are that by 1976, the next presidential election year, there barely will be enough White House aspirants to meet the needs of the two major parties.

If, in the interval, there is any sizeable outcropping of third party movements, there may not be enough candidates to go around, officials said.

Signs of the impending shortage were seen within the past days as Sen. McGovern denied a report he planned to run again, Sen. Mondale said he didn't know whether he would run, Gov. Reagan said he didn't think he wanted to be President and John Connally said he was "not at all sure" he would like to be in the White House.

Additionally, thus far this year there have been noncommittal statements by Eugene McCarthy, Sen. Kennedy, Gov. Wallace, Vice President Agnew, Gov. Rockefeller and Sen. Humphrey, among others.

Officials pointed out it was unusual to have so many nationally known politicians not running for President so far in advance of an election.

They said widespread outbreaks of disclaimers, uncertainties and indecision ordinarily would not occur until at least 1974.

"At this rate," one official said, "the Democratic and Republican nominations will go to someone by default and some of the third parties may not be able to field a ticket at all."

He recommended that two or more parties voluntarily get together and form a candidate "pool" by nominating the same person. Otherwise, he said, some sort of mandatory allocation program may be necessary to insure that all parties have standard bearers.

Asked what was causing the prospective paucity of presidential candidates, he said he was the old law of demand.

"The woods are full of politicians who would like to run, but there isn't any demand for them," he explained.

LETTERS FROM P-B READERS

As others see it . . . letters

Political debate

Many of our citizens have never during their lifetime had opportunity to actually witness opposing political viewpoints respectfully debated at public forums whereat qualified adversaries were afforded equal footing.

How might voters formulate rightful judgments on crucial issues, without the access to evaluate authentic public face-to-face debate . . . the true process through which fact, logic, justness and whole-truth must become self-evident?

Voter access to valid choices of political positions, is greatly dependent upon the qualification, the willingness and the integrity of those who we would entrust to represent the will-of-the-majority and to defend the public interest against disparity.

Widespread evidence of escalating detrimental public costs (inflation, disparity, public debt, corruption, lawnessness and inequality-of-access), indicates the majority of our politicians have become unduly permissive, frustrated, ineffective, derelict, or are unwilling to recognize the purpose of their incumbency.

It should be very interesting during the coming campaigns to determine why the interest of the preponderant voter majority (that of the "unorganized" consumers-&-taxpayers) has not been politically protected to prevent the irresponsible imposition of the detrimental practices which can be financed only through continuously higher consumer prices and sky-rocketing taxation. — C. S. Johnson, Pomona.

Gossip for today

You've heard about the cat on a hot tin roof but what happens when seven snails find themselves on a hot tin plate? They immediately get going, that's what. And as a result one of them wins an international snail race in which seven countries competed. The event was held in Spain and the Spanish snail finished first, setting a new world's snail race record by traveling 4 feet 1 inch in 5 minutes.

"So how silly can those Spaniards be?" I hear some of your sports minded readers asking. —Well, I suppose the answer is: Just about as silly as that American couple in Bakersfield who set a new nonstop kissing record of 7 hours. When it comes to setting world's records there's just no limit to what folks will do regardless of their nationality.

INSIDE REPORT

Congress may get antibusing bill

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — An attempt by six gifted Congressmen to head off emotionally charge antibusing legislation by promoting a compromise has been shattered by inflexible civil rights leaders.

The bipartisan, biracial coalition of six House members has been virtually disbanded less than two months after its formation, diminishing any hope for a middle ground. Rather, prospects are that the House next month will pass a tough antibusing amendment to the school aid bill in the closing days of the current session. In the absence of compromises, an antibusing bill — or perhaps even a constitutional amendment — may clear both Houses of Congress sooner or later.

To realistic proponents of high quality, racially integrated education, such an outcome would be tragic. That is why there is melancholy among them over the apparent message of the last few weeks: this is no time for moderation.

The first serious attempt at compromising the school busing issue came last year when two highly regarded Democratic Congressmen — Richardson Preyer of North Carolina, a Southern moderate, and Morris Udall of Arizona, a Western liberal — introduced compromise legislation. The bill, drafted by Prof. Alexander M. Bickel of Yale law school, seeks gradual integration in local schools without court-ordered busing and with a minimum of federal coercion. The reaction: mostly yawns.

With another White House-supported effort to abolish busing coming up in Congress, Udall and Preyer tried this past summer to generate interest in their bill. Consequently, they sought out two prestigious Republican moderates with good civil rights records: John Anderson of Illinois and Albert Quie of Minnesota. More important, they went to the swelling Black Caucus for help.

Compromise sought

Two freshmen black Congressmen considered less dogmatic than their senior colleagues — Georgia's Andrew Young, a onetime lieutenant of Martin Luther King, and Texas's Barbara Jordan, a former state senator — were asked to join in seeking a compromise. Without committing themselves to the Preyer-Udall bill, they agreed.

The result was a July 31 statement signed by the six Congressmen. While opposing antibusing legislation and supporting "the objectives of integration," the statement asserted that "the nation's educational problems . . . are continually inflamed by court-ordered busing" and complained about "disruptive judical interference." Behind that statement was the promise of Republican moderates, liberal Democrats and black Democrats joining in a new civil rights coalition.

But doughty civil rights lobbyist Clarence Mitchell of the NAACP saw no such promise. Whatever the purpose of the July 31 press conference, he telegraphed the six Congressmen, "it is difficult to conceive of anything that could create greater mischief." Furthermore, Mitchell thundered, the statement "is clearly designed to undermine court decisions."

On Aug. 2, Udall fired back a letter to Mitchell: "I . . . strongly and sincerely believe that your strategy keeps us locked in the same old trenches with a deteriorating legislative situation each year." Without compromise, Udall warned, Democratic Congressmen from Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York may join their colleagues from Michigan in the antibusing camp.

That next weekend, Rep. Young invited distinguished civil rights leaders to Arlie House at Warrenton, Va., to try to talk out the problem. The experiment failed.

Udall began on Friday night by warning, as he had in his letter to Mitchell, that it was fine to take a hard civil rights line when pro-integration forces had 260 votes in the 435-member house in the early 1960s. Now, he said, the civil rights vote against antibusing legislation is 130 votes — and fading.

Would rely on courts

His listeners were unimpressed. Dr. Kenneth Clark, the distinguished black psychologist from City University of New York, replied coldly that he would rely on the courts and not interfere with them. He was seconded by Joseph Rauh, the veteran white civil rights leader. On Saturday, Young received much more of the same.

Junior black politicians such as Young and Miss Jordan are properly reverent about the distinguished role played by Kenneth Clark and Clarence Mitchell in the great civil rights triumphs in the courts and Congress. They are not prepared to clash head-on with them. In effect, Young and Miss Jordan have left the newly formed coalition.

In fact, Udall fears that the coalition has been aborted. To build a congressional majority for a moderate integration program, support from the civil rights lobby is essential. Refusal to give that support invites regressive legislation which could end busing without providing a less obnoxious alternative.

Meat, cheese disappear because of scarcity

Cutbacks in food subsidies stir protests

SAN BERNARDINO (CNA) — Elimination of meat products, cheese and other high protein items from the federal surplus commodities program handled by the county for welfare recipients, has resulted in a rash of complaints, Supervisor James L. Mayfield told the Board of Supervisors this week.

"According to advice I have received, the U.S. government was forced to eliminate these items because of the scarcity and the high cost of the foods that have skyrocketed in the inflationary spiral," Mayfield said.

"We're going to change over to the food stamp method of aiding the welfare recipients by July 1, 1974, according to the government mandate which will make it easier for the county's poor and aged to buy the foods they consider necessary to exist. But in the meantime our welfare recipients who have been receiving surplus commodities food items will be forced to exist on a starch diet—and this could be a dangerous matter for some of the elderly," Mayfield insisted.

Other board members agreed with Mayfield and stated that they, too, had been receiving complaints on elimination of the high protein foods. "This is a drastic situation," board Chairman Nancy E. Smith said. "And it seems necessary that this board take some action to insure that the eliminated food items be made available."

County Administrator Robert A. Covington, when asked if county funds could be found somewhere, said he was fearful that any action taken by the board in alleviating the shortage might jeopardize the whole program of supplying food to welfare recipients if interim action was taken by the board.

Welfare Director George Jeffery, asked to express his view of the emergency, said he believed the food stamp program could be advanced to April 1 with cooperation of the state.

"We're not budgeted for this extra cost," Jeffery said, "and approximately $50,000 will be needed to furnish these high-protein items to low-income families.

"It's possible that some of these eliminated food items will again be made available, but we have no assurance of that happening," Jeffery said. "This food stamp mandate will force 790 of the nation's 3,129 counties and independent cities to scrap the surplus commodities program which means we'll have to phase out the present 43-employe staff and institute a new clerical staff."

Families receiving public-assistance payments may ask that the cost of their stamps be deducted from their relief checks. The coupons will be issued twice a month in order that families will have stamps throughout the month, Jeffery stated.

Using food stamps, the low-income families will have more grocery-buying power of their own choice which, according to Supervisor Ruben S. Ayala, should give the "mom and pop" stores more business. "These stores have been suffering under the surplus food commodities program," he said.

Under the stamp plan, those who qualify can buy the stamps at banks, credit unions, post offices and other public places, using them like money at the stores. A family of four with $387 a month income will pay $92 for $116 worth of stamps; the family of four with an income of only $100 monthly will pay $25 for $116 in food coupons; and a four-member family with less than $30 a month income will receive the stamps free.

The food stamps are printed by the Treasury Department in denominations of 50 cents, $1, $2 and $5 and are as good as cash in 180,000 grocery stores throughout the nation. And because they are as good as money, owners of the stamps will be asked to guard them as they would money.

The board asked Jeffery to give an estimated cost of the new food program, and he said that it would cost in the neighborhood of $650,000 as against the present cost of $475,000 per year.

Mayfield in the course of discussion stated, "These people are important and should be fed. Let's defer some of our building program."

Too accessible to kids

Porno movies at drive-ins hit

SAN BERNARDINO (CNA) — Those X-rated movies shown in county drive-in theaters aroused the wrath of County Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger this week. The County Board of Supervisors accepted his suggestion that County Counsel Stanford Herlick investigate the showing of these movies where under-age youngsters can view the pictures from the back end of the movie lot or from an adjoining highway.

"I think this is an invasion of my privacy," Hansberger said. "I have no quarrel with those people who want to view these movies, but let them view these pornographic offerings inside some theater where the children are not allowed.

"I've had a number of complaints, too," Hansberger said, "and it only seems fair that those unwilling to go to porno movies should be spared the view of some disgusting scenes as they travel by the drive-ins."

Supervisor Ruben S. Ayala joined Hansberger's line of thought, stating that a constituent of his had gone to a beautiful San Francisco restaurant and was seated next to a window overlooking a drive-in where "The Last Tango In Paris" was being played. "He was more than a little disturbed," Ayala said, "and he also voiced the belief that these showings ought to be held indoors, away from the children."

Supervisor James L. Mayfield said the same situation existed in Victorville where kids were observed in sneak viewings. "If adults want to watch these presentations," he said, "that's their business, but children should not be subjected to this type of film."

On way to full junior college program

Learning boom going on at YTS

By MAE TATE
P-B Staff Writer

CHINO — The college program at the Youth Training School has entered its eighth semester and participation and achievement remain on the upswing.

The program began in February 1970 as a result of the efforts of Bob McCarthy, supervisor of the education program at YTS, and professors and officials at La Verne College. Madeleine Nagyzena of the YTS staff was also among those involved in the college courses. She is now supervisor of the compensatory education program, the individual manpower development system and the federal enrichment program at YTS.

"I think the interest and enthusiasm is really great because it gives them a new status with which to identify," said Mylum Kelly, principal of academic instruction since June.

Same as campus

Kelly explained that "theoretically there is no difference in the courses here and those at a standard college except that they're taught on our grounds. The credits can be used at a college of their choice upon release."

Approximately 486 wards in the disciplinary institution for young men took advantage of the program during 1972-73. The fall program began Monday with enrollment high. Academic courses are offered by La Verne and Chaffey colleges while Cal State Los Angeles deals with "self-identity" courses, said Kelly.

The California Youth Authority contracts with Chaffey for classes in communication arts, English, math, biology, business administration, psychology, political science and sociology. The junior college teachers "are beginning to broaden the scope of the program they're bringing in" and dealing with more detail, the principal noted.

La Verne College offers history, philosphy, art, economics, literature and the ethnic American in U.S. history as well as some of the courses with a different emphasis on those taught by Chaffey teachers.

Self-Identity classes

The "self-identity" classes described by Kelly include Mexican-American studies, Pan-African studies, Swahili, contemporary politics and African history. These are all the tasks of Cal State.

"All the classes have been well received," said Kelly, quoting the participation figures. "In fact we're in the process of starting a full junior college curriculum that will lead to an associate of arts degree. This has been necessitated by the length of time our students have been assigned here.

"The age and the length of stay has made it necessary for us to establish some type of college program to lead toward a degree," Kelly stated. "This will provide them with a background so they can easily go into a four-year college upon release."

The age range is 16 to 23 for young men at YTS. There are a few as old as 25, but the general population usually consists of 20 and 21 year olds.

Kelly has estimated a projected date of January, 1974, for the beginning of such an endeavor. "However, I'm not going to say definitely because I have a lot of red tape to go through," he added.

Instructors provided

The colleges provide an instructor for each class they offer. The time schedule of each depends upon the individual college.

"Overall the college teachers have a great deal of respect and response from the students. We do have male and female teachers," Kelly pointed out. "Our student population is probably more respectful toward female teachers than they would be in the public schools. Most of them welcome the idea of having female teachers because of the limited contact with women. The kids enjoy the outside people coming in. They get a different perspective on things."

The official attitude toward the program has "been nothing but enthusiasm. The need is recognized by not only the administration here, but the authority itself. These programs are going at most of our institutions," Kelly added.

Responsibility with board

The Frontera College Board—composed of YTS administrators and officials, La Verne College personnel, businessmen, retired educators and civic leaders—is responsible for the YTS program. In addition to the program there, the board also sponsors former YTS wards in their pursuits of higher education throughout the state.

"I think traditionally the kids involved in the college program are more sophisticated and mature youngsters, more stable in the general population. The college program appeals to them.

"We encourage our students to work toward at least graduating from high school. If the kid flatly refuses, however, we don't force him to," the principal said.

The college program is voluntary and some are simultaneously enrolled in both the high school and college programs.

"In terms of need, this is part of the rehabilitation program. We are constantly struggling with tools with which to rehabilitate our youngsters. We're willing to provide them with anything that is meaningful and constructive to alter their life structures.

"Improving self-concepts and self-identity are the ingredients of success," Kelly concluded.

Doctors' union raps meddling by government

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The president of a doctors and dentists union has criticized the American Medical Association for "being derelict in dealing with government encroachment," in the field of health care.

"We're tired of agencies who know nothing about medicine telling us what to do," said Dr. Stanley S. Peterson, Springfield, Mo., and the president of the American Federation of Physicians and Dentists.

The AFPD's purpose, said Peterson, was "to help doctors protect the delivery of quality health care in the light of increasing interference by third parties."

He said these include government agencies, insurance companies and hospitals.

"The time is approaching when there will be a confrontation of doctors and government agencies across the bargaining table," said Peterson.

His comments came during a two-day meeting of the AFPD which ended Sunday. The independent labor organization claims to represent more than 55,000 members.

DDT foes are painted as modern Scrooges

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Idaho Christmas tree growers Monday portrayed environmentalist opponents of DDT as modern day Scrooges.

They called for the use of the pesticide, banned in the northwestern states, to halt an infestation of tussock moths which has moved into Idaho from neighboring Oregon.

The Christmas Tree Growers Association warned that, if environmentalists didn't go along with the use of DDT, they would have to use artificial trees at Christmas.

AMERICA'S SPORT CAR — Celebrating its 22nd year on the highway with new styling is the Corvette from Chevrolet. The model features a body-colored soft rear bumper system and an optional Gymkhana performance package for the sportsman desiring both road event competition and street use.

44 models appear in Chevrolet's 1974 line

Sturdiness and roadability are emphasized in the seven different passenger car lines from Chevrolet Motor Division for 1974.

Chevrolet's new cars and trucks are on display in dealership showrooms across the country. Fourty four models are being offered.

Greatest change is in the Chevelle line where a new sporty Laguna Type S-3 coupe has been added while a new Malibu Classic series replaces the Laguna series at the top of the line. The Malibu becomes the standard series, replacing the former deluxe designation.

Mid-year in the 1974 model run the special performance Cosworth Vega will be introduced. The heart of this limited production option will be the Cosworth Vega engine with dual overhead camshafts and 16 valves.

A sequential interlock seat belt system, three distinct bumper systems, various sizes of steel-belted radial ply tires, new roof designs and important chassis and structural improvements have been engineered into the 1974 models.

Engine power ranges from the Vega's aluminum alloy block four-cylinder, 140-cubic-inch power plant and the standard 250-cubic-inch six-cylinder up to an optional 454-cubic-inch V-8.

In compliance with emission standards, California engine availability will be different from the rest of the nation. All California V8s will have four-barrel carburetion. Chevrolet is making a four-barrel 400 V8 standard for all big Chevrolet wagons and a two-barrel 400 V8 standard for Chevelle wagons for improved performance.

Various other developments are available in 1974 Chevrolets such as new front and rear styling for standard-size cars, new styling for the Chevelle and Vega lines, new front and rear appearance for the Camaro and styling refinements for the Monte Carlo.

Fish, like humans, can get seasick if caught in heavy waves for an extended period of time.

California farmers planted 33,000 acres of rice in 1972, bring in a crop valued at $120 million.

What happens if Peron's heart gives out?

Argentinians awaken to sobering dawn

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

In the sober dawn after a night of celebrating Juan D Peron's return to the presidency of Argentina many an Argentinian must have awakened with a chill premonition.

It would come not from the host of problems needing immediate solution.

It would come from the fact that the country's new vice president is Peron's 40-year-old third wife Isabel.

It would come from the fact that Peron will be 78 on Oct. 8 just four days before he takes over responsibility for leading a divided nation out of its political instability and economic stagnation and that he is visited almost daily by a heart specialist.

Isabelita will be the first woman vice president in Latin American history It is not the break with tradition that rouses the chill.

Rather it is the fear that in trusting their future once more to the man the Argentine military ousted 18 years ago as a corrupt dictator Argentinians may have consigned themselves to a new era of even greater uncertainty and even more violence than the one they are leaving

Peron met Isabel a cabaret dancer in Panama during his wanderings after his ouster from office in 1955.

Whatever the aesthetic qualities of the dance it can offer little in the way of the practical experience needed of the politician and yet Peron's union with Isabel and even his selection of her as his vice presidential running mate both were in the Peron pattern

His second wife Evita was an actress who won the hearts of Argentina's "shirtless ones" who in turn gave Peron his political base. He once made her his running mate but in the last moment withdrew her name

But Isabel is no Evita. Her candidacy roused wide uneasiness as testified by the defacement of hundreds of posters featuring Isabelita.

Among Evita's one-time followers her memory is held in reverence which permits no competition.

Many among Peron's own followers believed until the last moment that he had placed his wife's name on the ballot merely to prevent internal jockeying within his fragmented justicillista party and at the last moment would name a substitute.

Her candidacy and the fear that Peron might not live to complete his four-year term has aroused the anxiety not only of the anti-Peronists but also of youthful leftwing Peronistas and especially of the army. The army permitted Peron's return only in a desperate last ditch hope that he would place national unity above political partisanship.

Peron himself has disclosed that a recent virus ailment affected his heart and that doctors have told him he must avoid excitement

Extremists of the Marxist left responsible for scores of kidnapings in the last year are seeking to win to their side the leftwing Peronist youth who are openly hostile to the unions providing Peron with his main strength.

Chilean troops crush plot to destroy junta

SANTIAGO Chile (UPI) — The ruling military junta said Monday night it smashed a ring of leftists loyal to overthrown Marxist President Salvador Allende crushing a plot "to destroy the armed forces" and "seed terror in the country."

The announcement came after the Foreign Ministry reported the United States and seven other countries granted diplomatic recognition to the two-week-old military junta that toppled Allende's regime

An army officer went on national television to show a huge cache of arms uncovered Sunday in the breakup of the reported leftist band. He said troops arrested 50 leftists in the alleged ring during an apartment-by-apartment search through the downtown Santiago

"They had advanced plans to seed terror in the country" the officer said. "They had plans to destroy the armed forces and detailed lists of officers their homes activities and their families"

He showed photographs of army officers allegedly in possession of the leftists "instructions on how to use arms" and "plans to assault the Armed Forces War College in Santiago."

A Foreign Ministry announcement said the United States, Venezuela, Panama, Haiti, Erucador, South Africa, South Korea and Jordan had recognized the new regime. bringing to 29 the number of nations to do so since the Sept. 11 coup

Military authorities also said army troops shot to death six "extremists" who tried to escape during transfer to a high-security prison camp Saturday night in the port city of San Antonio. A communique said the six were shot trying to escape from a truck that had broken down on the way to the camp

Meanwhile three American priests arrested in roundups of Allende supporters were still believed detained in Santiago's National Soccer Stadium along with thousands of other prisoners.

Church officials identified them as the Revs Francis Flynn of Miami, Joseph Dougherty of Boston, both Maryknolls and Charles Welsh from the Congregation of the Holy Cross in Massillon Ohio.

Women claim Moretti bill most significant

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The legislature voted this year to give equal community property rights and credit opportunities to California women and embark on a sweeping study of sex discrimination in the state's lawbooks.

The three areas top the list of big and small gains made by women in the male-dominated legislature during the 250 days of the 1973 session.

Although other measures might be more immediate in their impact, wonen observers say the most significant piece of equal rights legislation could prove to be a joint Assembly Senate resolution calling for study of California laws.

The approved measure (ACRddvwp6 AV SEMBLY by Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, created a six-member joint legislative committee and an advisory panel with responsibility to:

"Ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to conforming California laws, regulations and administrative guidelines with the principle that equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex."

The recently-appointed committee has among its members two of the legislature's strongest women's rights supporters, Sen. Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Los Angeles, and Assemblyman Walter Karabian, D-Monterey Park.

It must report to the full legislature by June 30, 1975 with recommendations on how to remove sex barriers from the law books. One report this year said there were at least 200 such discriminatory laws and regulations.

Also with a target date of 1975 is a bill giving women equal power with their husbands to acquire and dispose of community property Currently husbands are the legal head of a household and its property

Sponsored by Dymally the measure (SB569) was before the governor.

A related bill (AB312) by Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-Los Angeles would make it illegal for creditors to treat women differently than men

The measure its supporters say would be especially helpful to single women divorcees and widows who are frequently denied credit in their own names because of the present community property laws.

But it put off until next year final decision on a series of bills to allow women to register variously as "Ms" of "Mr." or with no designation whatsoever.

Minister doesn't blame Nixon for transfer

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rev. John A. Huffman, a Presbyterian minister in Key Biscayne, Fla., said Monday he has received many letters from people who claim he is being transferred to Pittsburgh because of an Easter sermon interpreted as critical of President Nixon.

BETTER DAYS — President Nixon and Rev. John A. Huffman are shown in a photo taken last April outside the minister's church in Key Biscayne, Fla. He delivered an Easter sermon which some interpret as critical of the President — and has since been transferred to a Presbyterian church in Pittsburgh, Penn. He denies rumors that the President arranged the transfer.

But Huffman, 33, said accusations that Nixon arranged the transfer were "absolutely false." He added the President often has counseled him in his career and "has encouraged me to be straight forward and outspoken."

Nixon attended services at the Key Biscayne Presbyterian Church last Easter Sunday when Huffman delivered the controversial sermon entitled "Almost a Christian." In it, Huffman advised the congregation to drop any friends who had proven untrue to Christian ideals.

Height of scandal

The sermon came at the height of the Watergate scandal and a few days later Nixon went on national television to announce the resignation of his top two aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.

Huffman, in an interview, said he received hundreds of letters after the sermon, about 90 per cent of them accusing him of "a lack of tact and insulting the President." Later, he said, when it was learned that Huffman was to be transferred to the First Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh, he received many letters saying "poor guy, you really got a job done on you." Some of them were "abusive and obscene," he added.

A national magazine also recently printed a rumor that Huffman's transfer, scheduled to take effect Nov. 18, was arranged by Nixon.

Encouraged

But Huffman said he talked to Nixon immediately following the Easter sermon and the President encouraged him to stay in Key Biscayne. "He did not take offense," the minister said. "I preach the Gospel straight forward and let it fall where it may, but I never single out anyone."

He said the President at the time was in a position "where anything I said would be in relation to him" while he was sitting in the congregation.

Huffman said he has not talked to the President since Easter. But, he said, he has been in touch with Nixon by letter and through mutual associates, including Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo.

'Peace and order' is theme in Argentina

By MARTIN MCREYNOLDS

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) —The Argentine government promised a tough "peace and order" campaign against leftist guerrillas Monday following the landslide election of Juan D. Peron as the nation's next president.

The government, taking Peron's overwhelming victory as a mandate to curb guerrilla activity, outlawed the People's Revolutionary Army, a Marxist commando group which had rejected a truce plea by Peronist authorities.

Officials issued a decree outlawing the guerrilla group for its "campaign of threats, slander and acts of violence against the government and its authorities, as well as various other institutions."

Authorities also swore in Miguel Angel Iniguez, a retired army general with a reputation for toughness, as chief of the federal police Monday afternoon to replace resigning Heraclio Ferrazano.

"I am going to work in my new position for what the people want: peace and order," Iniguez told newsmen.

He claimed he could wipe out leftist guerrilla opposition to the government because of Peron's election victory despite his predecessor's inability to curb commando activity.

"Now the people have expressed their wishes in something like a plebiscite, and the action to be carried out is, therefore, of a different nature," Iniguez said.

Peron, 77, won 61.8 per cent of the vote in Sunday's election collecting more than twice the ballots of his nearest rival in the four-man field. He will be inaugurated Oct. 12 with his third wife, Isabel, 44, a former cabaret dancer, as his vice president.

Peron, who served as president from 1946 to 1955, was barred from last March's presidential election by the armed forces. His stand-in, Hector Campora, easily won the contest, however, and established a Peronist government.

The armed forces let Peron return to live in Argentina

Sweden bids farewell to king

FAREWELL TO A KING—The funeral procession containing the closed coffin of King Gustaf VI of Sweden passes Gustaf Adolph's Square. In background is the Royal Castle in Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM (UPI) -- Church bells pealed across Stockholm and the solemn rhythm of muffled drums led a royal funeral cortege today for the burial of King Gustaf VI Adolf of Sweden.

A 450-yard funeral procession containing Gustaf's closed coffin, his royal crown resting on a mantle above an open hearse, slowly threaded its way through Stockholm's Old City. The hearse was drawn by six horses.

King Carl XVI Gustaf marched behind the flag of the realm, which followed the coffin. Behind him marched the royal family and foreign dignitaries, including five kings and six queens.

A crowd, at places five persons deep, watched the cortege passed from vantage points behind two rows of soldiers.

The atmosphere in Stockholm proper seemed like a Sunday morning, with few persons venturing onto the streets.

Officers carrying the fluttering flags of 85 regiments and other units led the parade followed by a detachment of muffled drums and a company of grenadiers. Civil officials, military authorities, government officials, parliament leaders, the court and royal household also marched.

The Royal Household cavalry [illegible] followed the top aides to the Royal Court.

Gustaf Adolf died Sept. 15 at the age of 90, at the time the world's oldest reigning monarch.

Aaron: time is short

ATLANTA (UPI) — Hank Aaron thinks he can hit the two home runs he needs to tie Babe Ruth's career record in the Atlanta Braves' four remaining games but breaking that record this year "may be asking too much."

The 39-year-old Aaron has 712 homers, 39 this season. Ruth's record is 714.

"I still feel I have a chance," Aaron said Tuesday night after going hitless in the Braves' 5-1 loss to Los Angeles.

"I feel I can still hit two home runs in the four games we have left. But 715," Aaron mused, it's going to be tough to hit three home runs in four days. The only way I could do it would be to hit two in one game. No, my chances of hitting three home runs doesn't look very good."

Aaron was 0-for-4 against Dodger right-hander Don Sutton Tuesday night. But he came mighty close in the seventh inning when he drove centerfielder Willie Davis near the 402-foot marker with a low liner.

"That was the first really good pitch Sutton gave me to hit," said Aaron. "It was a low fast ball. But I was guessing high ball and I just got my bat half way round, then stopped. For some reason, I didn't hit the ball like I usually do. I didn't follow through. I was surprised it carried as far as it did."

Sutton "thought it was gone. I said to myself. 'There's 713.' It was the best pitch I gave him to hit."

Sutton wanted one point perfectly clear. "If Hank Aaron expected me to lay the ball in there, then he had the wrong guy. The thing is, Hank Aaron doesn't need anyone to lay one in. He's going to break the record—and it's going to be off some pitcher who challenges him."

Any pitcher who does "lay it in" probably would get in trouble since Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn is in town to watch Aaron's try for the Ruth record. Kuhn has warned dire consequences for any pitcher who deliberately serves up home run balls Nos. 714 or 715.

Aaron said he felt "no pressure" Tuesday night but admitted he was "a little nervous at first, then I settled down."

"I felt good," he said. "I just ran into someone (Sutton) who was better than I was for the night."

Sutton, who had a no-hitter going for 5 1-3 innings and a one-hit shutout for 7 1-3, got Aaron to bounce out with a slider in the second inning, got him to pop up on a "fast ball going away" in the fourth, had him hit that 400-foot liner off a low fast ball in the seventh and then got him to ground out again in the ninth.

"I had pitches to hit," said Aaron. "He's a good pitcher, you have to respect him."

The Dodgers got two runs and three hits off Atlanta kunckleballer Phil Niekro in the first inning, then Niekro blanked them on two singles over the next seven innings. Ron Cey cinched it in the ninth with a three-run homer off reliever Dave Cheadle.

"This season has been a good season for me, individually," said Aaron, who is hitting .291 with 90 runs batted in. "My legs feel good, I just feel good. Last year, after the strike, it took me a month to play back into shape.

"I hit 34 home runs last year and, without the strike, I would have hit about 40.

"Then this business with Ruth would now be over."

Hacienda fans enjoy 6-2 mark

Hacienda League football fans are probably still celebrating their big first week when six of the eight schools recorded victories.

Especially impressive were the three wins over the San Antonio League as the 2-A circuit showed its muscle against its 3-A neighbors.

The local high school football season, which always creates the most excitement, is off and running with the prospects for a banner year.

However, we wish the high schools could make atending games a little more enjoyable and help the poor writers by publishing decent programs.

It seems the quality of programs has been dropping the past few years.

One of the SAL schools didn't even print the first names of its players in a home program last week and others are hard to read.

Kenyon, Meoli report

Notes from here and there:

Southpaw pitcher Frank Kenyon, former Bonita High star, and shorstop Rudy Meoli of Royal Oak High are among 26 angels participating in the Arizona instructional program. Others include Bobby Valentine, who is starting his comeback from his broken ankle. Kenyon was 9-4 at Salinas in the California League with an 1.89 earned run average. At El Paso in the Class AA Texas League, he compiled a 6-4 record with a 3.72 ERA . . .

When Don Coryell's St. Louis Cardinals upset George Allen's Washington Redskins Sunday, it was a battle of former Whittier College coaches. What other college can claim two National Football League mentors? Former Ganesha High and MSAC star Don Shy returned a kickoff 97 yards for the Cards in the game. Coryell, who coached Shy at San Diego State, picked him up from the Chicago Bears.

USC reports Allen Carter will be suiting up for Saturday night's big game against Oklahoma. He missed the Trojans' first two games with a bad knee as his career continues to be hampered by injuries. Former Bonita teammate Charlie Schuhmann has carried the ball five times for UCLA in gaining 18 yards. He figures to get his big chance next year when James McAlister leaves.

San Dimas High is switching its Tournament of Champions, the outstanding basketball event, to Mt. San Antonio College this fall from Cal Poly. Kellogg Gym at Poly was a little too spacious for a tourney. St. Elizabeth High of Oakland will be the guest team this year. San Dimas athletic director Bob Baiz is looking for help in entertaining the St. Elizabeth team when it is here in December.

Parrish: All-American

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

POMONA — It is a rarity when the Pomona Valley can claim a high school All-American in football.

Considering the number of prep layers throughout the United States, it's amazing such an honor can happen to an area of our size.

But Walnut Highs Lance Parrish is rated one of the top 23 players in the U.S. by Letterman Magazine, a national high school sport publication.

However, the magazine rated Parrish because of his defensive play last year in leading Walnut to a 10-1 season. This season, Parrish is quarterbacking the Mustangs.

"It's a tremendous honor," Walnut coach Ken Gun said about Parrish's selection. "He deserves it. In his first game at quarterback, he completed 18 to 36 passes for 339 yards and five touchdowns. I would say that's a good start."

Gunn talked about his QB at Tuesday's weekly sports luncheon where Parrish was honored as the Hacienda League Player of the Week for leading Walnut to a 30-24 victory over Nogales in the opening game.

"We're scared to death about the Hacienda League," Gunn said about the league campaign. "Six of the eight teams opened with wins. It's probably the best opening the league has ever had."

Ganesha High's Garry Norvell doesn't mind being the only coach in the San Antonio League to enjoy a win in the first week.

"Maybe that's a great sign for us," Norvell laughed.

Ganesha, a 25-7 winner over Azusa in its opener, travels to Oxnard this Friday and Norvell has no idea of what to expect. "We're not used to going on trips beyond Upland," the Giants' coach quipped.

The Giants' Jim Maniaci was honored as the San Antonio SAL Player of the Week for rushing for 93 yards on 10 carries.

Mt. San Antonio College's Mal Eaton isn't overjoyed about learning his Mounties are now rated second in the state behind El Camino.

"It doesn't mean anything at this time of year" Eaton said. "If we're still that high at the end of the season, it will mean something."

The Mounties have been moving up because of their impressive wins over Citrus and Golden West but Eaton isn't looking past winless L.A. Harbor this Friday.

Hewitt waived

PHILADELPHIA — Former MSAC basketball star Bill Hewitt Friday was picked up by the NBA Philadelphia 76ers on waivers from the Buffalo Braves.

Hewitt played at MSAC in 1965 and '66 then finished his college career at USC. He was originally drafted by the Lakers.

Cleon Jones celebrates Mays' night

By United Press International

Cleon Jones put it quite simply.

"I wanted to do something tonight. It was Willie's night and I wanted to go out there and do something big."

That's just what Jones did on Willie Mays night when he hit a game-winning homer and made a spectacular game-saving catch as the New York Mets edged the Montreal Expos 2-1 Tuesday night to move a step closer to the National League Eastern Division crown.

The victory moved the Mets 1 ½ games ahead of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost to Philadelphia 2-1. New York is 80-77 and the Pirates are 78-78. New York has five games left and the pirates have six left.

With the Pirates now trailing by a game in the loss column, Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh said, "we have to rely on someone beating the Mets for us. If they win all the rest of their games, we're done. That's the way it is."

It was the Mets' seventh straight victory and Manager Yogi Berra said, "it's like with the Yanks. At this time of year, we always said it was time to put a new wing on the house."

A throng of over 53,000 went to Shea Stadium to honor Mays, who has announced he is retiring at the the end of this season, on his farewell appreciation night. Mays was in uniform but didn't play because of his injured ribs.

But once the game started, Jones was the show.

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter and Mike Anderson and Bill Robinson slugged homers to lift Philadelphia over Pittsburgh. Carlton, a 27-game winner last year, gained his 13th win against 19 losses.

It's now just about a two-team race. Chicago is in third place, 3 ½ games back while St. Louis and Montreal are both four games out.

In the other games, Chicago edged St. Louis 4-3, Houston beat San Francisco 5-1, Los Angeles beat Atlanta 5-1 and Cincinnati edged San Diego 3-2.

Singer's magic number still one

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

ANAHEIM — For Bill Singer, the magic number still is one.

One more win and the Diamond Bar resident will attain coveted 20 victory season.

He richly deserved it Tuesday night. But an acute case of "doubleplayitis" suffered by his teammates in late innings kept the Angels from scoring any runs.

So rather than winning 2-1, 3-1, or 4-1 as well he might have, Singer suffered a 4-1 loss in 10 innings to Texas and now is 19-14 instead of 20-13.

He did swell his season strikeout total to 234 and he passed the 300 mark in innings pitched.

"Singer pitched well and we played and executed poorly," grunted manager Bobby Winkles afterward.

The Angels got men on base with one or less outs in each of the seventh, eighth, and ninth innings of a 1-1 ball game. Each time, a batter was unable to bunt and each time a double play choked off the scoring threat.

Jeff Torborg singled with one out in the seventh. Shortstop Dave Chaulk hit into a doubleplay. Mickey Rivers, who had two doubles and a triple, led off the eighth inning with his second double. Vada Pinson walked and it looked like the Angels were going to be able to score.

But Frank Robinson, attempted to bunt, popped the ball into the air and was an easy out. Bob Oliver ended the threat by hitting into a fast 5-4-3 double play.

Tom McCraw led off the ninth with a single. But Richie Scheinblum, who had batted .469 (15 for 32) in an eight game winning streak, ended his streak and completed a hitless night by lining to the shortstop who doubled McCraw off first.

In the 10th, the Rangers scored three runs on three singles and an intentional walk. Included was a successful sacrifice which put runners on second and third with nobody out and induced the intentional walk (to hot-hitting Jeff Burroughs).

The infield was then drawn in and former Halo Jim Spencer hit a ball which bounced over second baseman Billy Parker's head. It drove in two runs and the third scored on Alex Johnson's infield out. Johnson was given the heave-ho for expressing his displeasure with umpire Joe Brinkman's call.

Spencer's hit ironically looked like it would have been an easy double play if the infielders had been at their normal depth.

Singer struck out only three and fanned no one after the fourth inning. Oddly, he walked no one until there were two out in the sixth and issued only four including the intentional pass to Burroughs in the 10-inning affair.

Billy No-No faced only the minimum nine batters the first three innings and was touched for only six hits through nine innings. All nine Ranger hits were singles.

The Angels scored in the second when Jeff Torborg reached second on shortstop Jim Mason's wild throw on his grounder. Torborg scored on Chaulk's single.

Thereafter the Angels were helpless with runners in scoring position.

Singer somehow retained his sense of humor.

Winkles revealed that when the Angels scored 15 runs for Nolan Ryan Sunday, he had promised Singer the club would do the same for him in five innings in his next start. "We'll let you pitch long enough to get credit for the win, then take you out so you'll be rested for your last start," the manager said.

At the end of the fifth inning, Singer returned to the Halo dugout and said to Winkles, "Skip, we're 14 (runs) short."

It's doubtful the-still-19-game winner will do any joking Saturday night when he makes his last start of the season.

ANGEL NOTES — Winkles revealed that Robinson bunted on his own when he popped out in the eighth inning, "Spencer was playing back and knew he'd bunt in that situation, "Winkles said. "It's just what I would have wanted him to do."

Rivers' three hits extended his hitting streak to nine games. The little speedster now has 18 hits in his last 42 at bats (.429).

Rich Hand (6-6) faces Sonny Siebert (7-12) in tonight's series finale.

In a minor trade, infielder Jerry DaVanon was traded from the Salt Lake City team to the St. Louis Cardinals for third baseman-outfielder Bill Stein. Stein was assigned to the Cards' Tulsa farm club.

SAL knows how Pac-8 teams feel

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

If you think the Pacific-8 Conference has gotten off to a bad start this season, take a look at what happened to the San Antonio League during the first week of high school action.

As most people know, USC and UCLA have been the only two schools in the Pac-8 which have won at least one game in the past three weeks. But in the SAL, only one came away with a victory in the season openers last weekend.

The Ganesha Giants, second-place finishers in the SAL last year with a 5-2 record, extended their winning streak to six against Azusa, 25-7, to claim the only San Antonio League victory for the weekend.

What was interesting in the near-shutout of the SAL was that the Hacienda League, which competes in a lower division of competition (2-A) as compared to the SAL (3-A), came away with a clean sweep in the three big rivalries of the valley.

Bonita stunned defending SAL champion Claremont, 14-0, San Dimas trimmed Damien, 10-7, and highly-touted Alta Loma thumped Montclair, 35-6.

"I don't mind," smiled Ganesha High coach Garry Norvell. "I hope they keep losing — as long as we win, that's all that counts."

Ganesha running back Jim Maniaci, who was a part of the Giant team which finished last season with a 7-2 record under the Wishbone attack, was named this week's San Antonio League Player of the Week.

"This is the second year Jim has started for us in the backfield," noted Norvell. "And this year it looks like he's really got it figured out. He's improved over last year.

"Jim runs a 4.9 (40-yard dash) consistently," Norvell added. "He ran the ball 10 times for 93 yards against Azusa, and that's not bad for our kind of attack."

The Wisbone attack in Ganesha's offense doesn't feature any one runner. "We've got six good running backs and two good quarterbacks," Norvell pointed out.

The key figures in that Giant backfield besides Maniaci include running backs Kevin Braxton and Jeff Lambert and quarterback Tracy Cowger.

Ganesha faces two tough tasks this weekend in wrapping up the non-league confrontations. First the Giants must travel to Oxnard, and then they must face Oxnard High.

"I don't know how we got them (Oxnard) on our schedule," grinned Norvell. "We're not used to traveling any further than Upland."

Oxnard lost to Hueneme, 14-0, in its season opener last weekend, but that's about all Norvell knows about the team. "I do know that they're aggressive — maybe too aggressive. Sometimes their aggressiveness gets them into trouble."

Anyway, the Giants will be shooting for their seventh straight win before the league season begins.

After being stunned by Pacific, 7-6, in their season opener, the Pomona Red Devils will be looking for ways to make their passing game a little more effective.

The Devils go up against Fontana Friday night at the Steelers' field, and Pomona head coach Mike Clifton has already indicated that the Red Devils will be using a little different offense.

"We moved Tom Jones to tight end when we lost Jim McCain for the season," Clifton pointed out. "And Friday night Steve Taylor (Pomona quarterback) and I were completely frustrated."

Going on to explain the frustration, Clifton explained, "He (Taylor) couldn't see Tom. He's not very tall for a tight end, and he's considerably shorter than McCain. A lot of our passing attack relies on a good tight end.

"So we're going to change our offense a little," he added. "We won't be using a tight end. We'll go with two split ends and slot back."

The other split end will be Jerome Holliman, while Lamont Harris will fill in the slot back position. Harris scored Pomona's only touchdowns last weekend on a 39-yard pass play from Taylor.

"We might try to go to the run a little more this week," indicated Clifton. "But I don't know if it'll be a good time to do it. Fontana will be one of the strongest teams we'll face this year, if not THE strongest."

Clifton pointed to Jim Price, Devil of the Week, and Randy Meastas as turning in outstanding performances for Pomona.

Claremont will try to bounce back from its loss to Bonita when the Wolfpack runs up against Glendora this weekend. Glendora defeated Upland last weekend with a come-from-behind 21-14 triumph.

"I thought Bonita executed well," praised Claremont coach Esper Keiser. "They did what they intended to do. And we weren't sharp enough to not make mistakes. We'll continue to work on our basics this week."

Garey promised exciting football this fall, and the Vikings didn't let the fans down last weekend against Brea.

Coach Lawson Bush's troops had to settle for a 20-20 tie, but the first-year skipper was impressed with the pass blocking and the hustle on the defense.

The Vikings go up against Ramona this weekend, and Bush pointed out, "They're a lot like Brea, with big running backs."

The excitement Garey generated in its opener was brought about by a 75-yard touchdown run by Stanley Webster early in the game and a 95-yard kickoff return for a touchdown by Derrick Daley a little later.

In the other four games this weekend, Upland battles Alta Loma in hopes of keeping the Hacienda League from completely shutting out the SAL for the year, Damien will take on a tough West Covina team, Montclair will battle Ontario in another SAL-Hacienda confrontation, and Chino faces Azusa.

Ex-Ganesha gridder will start for Troy

LOS ANGELES — Former Ganesha High gridder Dean Lingenfelter, a senior tight end, will start for the USC Trojans Saturday night against Oklahoma at the Coliseum.

Lingenfelter, a non-letter winner from last year, replaces Jim O'Bradovich, who has started Troy's first two games.

Lingenfelter was a 1969 graduate of Ganesha High, where he played football for coach Garry Norvell. He was an All-San Antonio League tight end and a 14-flat high hurdler for coach Bud Petersen's track team.

Erickson may quit Lakers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Keith Erickson, the forgotten holdout of the Los Angeles Lakers says he may give up pro basketball to become a movie actor.

"It's all up to the Lakers," Erickson said Tuesday. "I'm trying to negotiate with the Lakers but they're telling me that they're not interested in paying me this year."

The nine-year NBA veteran, like Wilt Chamberlain, has an opoion year remaining on his expired contract and the club has maintained that it will not renegotiate his contract.

"I have been offered a starring role in a movie to play a detective in a film called 'Venice West' that will be made this fall," Erickson said.

Montview League

Back to the drawing board

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

Despite only one win in three contests the valley's Montview League hopefuls, Charter Oak, Nogales and Rowland played pretty good football in their season openers.

The teams will now go back to the practice fields and the film rooms to make adjustments or decisions on how to improve or correct execution in preparation for game two.

Charter Oak drew blanks against Royal Oak last Friday night but set up three Roman scores — in the 24-0 loss — via fumbles.

"Fumbles and a poor secondary were our real problems," said Lancer head coach Wayne Fetters. "I thought the game would be close, in fact, I felt that a touchdown would separate the game. But errors put us behind.

"We went into the contest with an idea of what we had to do but our mistakes put us behind early which forced us to play catchup football. And that meant we had to change our game plan."

"(Len) Mussack has fine club and I think that (Clyde) Christensen is an outstanding back . . . about as fine a scrambler as I've ver seen as a high school quarterback."

The Lancers received fine performances from defensive tackle Steve Pickle and offensive tackle Roy Griffith. Fullback Nick Howard netted 93 yards in 20 carries.

Charter Oak must now prepare for Saturday night's 8 p.m. contest with Covina.

Covina has lost 10 straight so they will be hungry. Also, since the schools are geographically close the Lancer-Colt rivalry might decide the outcome.

In the past six years, CO has won three and tied one. The Lancers won last year 16-8.

"These are practice games as far as we're concerned. We generally aim at being fired up by the time the first league game comes around," concluded Fetters. "We're not pushing the panic button from the loss, we just need to get more patience."

While the talk has been Lance Parrish's outstanding performance in Walnut's 30-24 win over Nogales last Saturday night, little has been said about the Nobles' defense.

True, Parrish was impressive in completing 18 of 36 passes for 339 yards and five touchdowns but it's been lightly noted that the Mustangs tallied all their points in the first half.

Nogales came out in the second half to shutdown the Walnut-scoring machine and scored two touchdowns in keeping the game close.

"We shut them out in the second half," said Nogales coach Archie Carter. "We made an adjustment in our secondary for the final two periods.

"We should have won the game," continued Carter. "Twice during the second half we were inside their 15-yard line but lost the ball on interceptions."

The game had to be exciting to witness. All together there were nine touchdown passes.

Nogales' signal-caller, Walt Stahl, had an equally fine game. Stahl fired TD tosses of 41-yards to Napoleeon Sparks, 33-yards to Sam Abrams and 41 and 25-yard scoring strikes to Lester Jackson.

Stahl finished with nine completions for 243 yards.

"I'm excited about this team," concluded Carter. "We're young but we're coming around. If we avoid injuries we're going to surprise a few people.

The kids were very pleasing. After scoring only five TD's all last year we score four times in our first game this season. And our first score came on our very first offensive play of the season."

The Nobles play San Dimas Friday night at Bonita High in an 8 p.m. kickoff.

"They're (San Dimas) exceptionally quick and have good size but what's most impressive is their overall quickness," said Carter.

The Saints won last year's contest 13-0.

Rowland was the only winner of the valley's Montview League entries.

The Raiders romped Yucaipa 27-12, as quarterback Flavio Garcia, and brother Don and David Pearce sparked the opening-season win Saturday night.

Coach Gary Rawls' Raiders will put their one-game winning streak on the line Friday night playing hosting Parrish and the Walnut Mustangs.

Benefit Shoot in Whittier

WHITTIER — For the twelfth consecutive year, the Southern California Archery Association will sponsor its City of Hope Benefit Shoot on Sunday, Oct. 7, at the Whittier Narrows Archery Range, Whittier, beginning at 7 a.m., according to SCAA president Tim Sizemore.

The meet, which annually draws shooters from throughout Los Angeles, Riverside, Orange and San Diego Counties, this year expects that more than 400 archers will take part, with additional bowmen coming from the central and northern parts of the state, as well as form Arizona and Nevada.

An added attraction this year will be the appearance of Cal Vogt, national bow hunter and pin champion, and a police competition.

Other principles are tourney co-chairman Jerry Hartman, target chairman Jerry Miller of the Pomona Valley Bowhunters, Joyce Hartman and Lynn Gardner.

Poly hires coaches for track, BB

The Cal Poly athletic department is undergoing several coaching changes.

Fred Jones is the new track and cross country coach.

Jones replaces Ron Allice, who is the track coach at Long Beach State.

Jones graduated from Morgan State University in 1959 where he ran middle distances and was acclaimed CIAA champion in the two and half mile runs.

He served as head coach of the California University International Track Club from 68-73 head coach at West Los Angeles Junior College in '68-69 and coach of the United States women's track team in 1969.

Head football coach Roy Anderson relates that approval has not yet come from administration to replace defensive secondary coach Bob Nero, who resigned last week to become the new Dean of Students at Bassett High School.

Nero joined the Broncos' coaching staff in 1972 after serving as head track coach and assistant football coach at Bassett high for two years.

Allen Van Winkle is the new junior varisty basketball coach.

Van Winkle, 25, is a 1971 graduate of the University of Southwest Louisiana where he spent the past three years as student assistant coach under Beryl Shipley. He is credited with helping the USL program by his scouting coaching and recruiting abilities.

He was born in Indianapolis but was raised in Lafayette, Ind., where he lettered two years in basketball at Jefferson High before starting for two seasons at St. Johns J.C at Palatka, Florida.

Van Winkle is replacing Caldwell Black who is now the head basketball coach at Los Angeles Southwest J.C.

Alan LaRocque, who played at Poly's varsity basketball team last year, will serve as graduate assistant and freshman basketball coach in 1973.

Parrish doing the job at Walnut

By JIM McCONNELL
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — The story's the same, only the name has changed. In Friday's football opener for Walnut High, a Mustang quarterback completed 18 of 36 passes for 339 yards and five touchdowns to upend Nogales, 30-24.

His name? No, it isn't Ron Himes. The 1973 Mustang pigskinners were sparked by the aerial display of Lance Parrish, who filled Himes' shoes just fine, in leading the Mustangs to victory. For his efforts, Parrish, who is a three-sport varsity letterman and an All-Pomona Valley pick as a defensive back last season, was named the Progress-Bulletin's Hacienda League Player of the Week.

The 6'3" 195-pound Parrish made his varsity quarterbacking debut against Nogales, and while he won't make people forget Ron Himes just yet, he certainly eased coach Ken Gunn's anxiety about the Mustang signal calling slot.

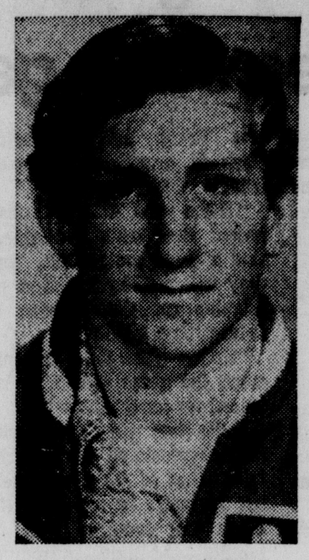
"No question about it," stated Gunn, "Lance is a fine athlete. As he learns more about the quarterbacking position, he should improve greatly by season's end."

Parrish, who is a senior this year, last played quarterback as a member of the freshman squad. About the only way one could tell he was relatively inexperienced in his new role were the four interceptions he served up to the Nogales secondary. But he more than offset those by firing five TD passes, three to tight-end Mike Pfeil and two to receiver and fellow basketballer Kirk Christ.

The heroics of Parrish were especially noteworthy in that Walnut had to battle back from 6-0, 12-6, and 18-12 deficits to nail down the win against the stubborn Nobles.

In being chosen P-B's Hacienda League player of the week, Parrish looks like he's ready to continue the fine quarterbacking tradition started by Himes. Parrish, who is also a standout pitcher on the Mustang baseball squad, certainly was firing strikes with the football against Nogales.

HACIENDA HIGH NOTES: Walnut — In addition to Parrish's fine performance, coach Gunn praised the efforts of running backs Doug McDermott and Bob Fausel. McDermott and Fausel rushed for 85 and 60 yards respectively in the win over the Nobles. Of concern to Gunn was the 80 yards in penalties assessed against the Mustangs and a defensive secondary which surrendered four TD passes to Nogales.



LANCE PARRISH
. . . Walnut star

San Dimas — Coach Bob Baiz' troops proved they weren't really underdogs after all by posting a 10-7 win over favored Damien, the second year in a row the Saints have opened by defeating the Spartans. Coach Biaz had nothing but praise for his defense which limited Damien to only one TD in the contest. Dave Maloof's field goal, a 23-yarder, proved to be the margin of victory. It was also noteworthy in that the three-pointer was the first in the Saints young history.

Alta Loma — Coming off a 35-6 romp over Montclair, coach Tom Cook had special praise for his offensive and defensive lines. In particular, Cook singled out defensive lineman Remy Para, a 6'5" 255-pound senior who, despite being double-teamed much of the game, made 12 unassisted tackles. Ted Pedvin's 69-yard punt return for a TD opened the scoring gates for the Braves and they rolled up 35 points in the first half and coasted to the win. Coach Cook used the easy win to play many underclassmen in the final half, as Montclair was able to light up the scoreboard only once the entire night.

Bonita—Head coach Pete Lopez had plenty to smile about in his team's opening 14-0 victory over Claremont. Junior quarterback Harold Drake, considered to be the second-string signal-caller before the season began, had a standout game and seems to have won the regular QB spot. Richard Ortega and Bob Rees provided the ground game with near identical totals of 83 and 85 yards rushing respectively, while the Bearcat defense stymied Claremont without a score. Coach Lopez is looking for his Bearcats to feature that good defense and a ball-control offense in a quest for the Hacienda crown.

Ontario — Jaguar mentor Doug Brooks has reason ot be concerned as his squad comes off a 37-6 loss to Rancho Alamitos. Ontario, highly regarded in the preseason, did not fair that badly in the statistical department, but several costly turnovers put the Jaguars in a hole. One bright note for Ontario was running back Marty Verdusco, who rushed for 96 yards on 14 totes to pick up where he left off last season when he gained over 1,000 yards on the ground.

Royal Oak—Rookie coach Len Mussack opened with a big 24-0 win over rival Charter Oak Friday. Roman quarterback Clyde Christensen fired three TD tosses in the surprisingly easy triumph. The victory against an always tough Charter Oak team definitely puts the Romans in the midst of contention for the Hacienda League title.

The unusual balance of the Hacienda loop was made evident in the opening week's action. Only Ontario really took it on the chin, but the Jaguars are expected to bounce back in a hurry. Every coach agrees that it is anyone's race in 1973 and a domination such as happened with Walnut last season is extremely unlikely.

Pomona AYSO holds sign-ups, plans clinic

POMONA — The Pomona American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) will hold late registration for its coming season at Palomares Park Saturday between 9 a.m. and noon.

Boys will register in three age groups ranging between seven and 15. At the same time tryouts will be held for the 13-15 age group only.

The new season is slated to begin on Saturday, Oct. 20, and preparations are being made to ensure that it will be as successful as last year's.

To aid those persons who will be officiating, coaching, or in any other way will be related to youth soccer, Pomona AYSO will hold a series of four soccer clinics at Palomares Junior High School Cafetorium on Oct. 2, 3, 9, and 10.

Topics to be covered are: Introduction to AYSO, laws of the game, effective refereeing, learning and teaching soccer skills (i.e., passing, shooting, heading, trapping, throwing-in, dribbling, tackling, goal keeping), soccer strategy and systems of play, dead ball situations, and a panel session with experienced AYSO coaches on managing an AYSO team. There is no fee for the clinic and all interested adults are welcome to attend.

AYSO's policy of giving every boy a chance to play at least a half game every game will once again be strictly enforced this year.

For additional information, please call Adrian Mercado, Regional Commissioner, at 624-8922.

Browns, Bengals agree to switch

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Football officials have had to change the place of action for two Browns-Bengals clashes since the Cincinnati Reds will be using Riverfront Stadium for the National League baseball playoffs.

The Bengals and Browns each had scheduled one home game with the arch rival, Oct. 7 and Dec. 9 respectively, but will switch territories to relinquish the stadium to baseball.

Rams-49er game a sellout; Bay Area fans get it on TV

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers announced Tuesday that Sunday's game with the Los Angeles Rams at Candlestick Park is a sellout and thus will be telecast locally.

"There are still 78 obstructed view seats available," said a 49ers spokesman, "but they will not be included as saleable for the purpose of determining a sellout.

"Under the Congressional edict, the game should be released for local telecast."

While they will comply with the congressional edict on the telecasting of all games sold out 72 hours in advance, the 49ers will continue with attempts to gain immunity from the law as it relates to local telecasting.

"We have requested of the city attorney a statement of the legal position of the City as it relates to the clause in the 49ers lease of Candlestick Park which specifically prohibits the telecasting locally of games played in Candlestick," the 49ers spokesman said.

The city of San Francisco floated bonds in excess of $17 million to rebuild Candlestick Park two years ago and part of the contract with the 49ers included a ban on local telecasting.

Mounties greeting water polo teams

WALNUT — An 11-team field, featuring the 1972 No. 1 and No. 2 community college water polo teams will compete Friday and Saturday in the second annual Mountie invitational Water Polo Tournament.

Fullerton and Orange Coast are the top seeds in the event which gets underway at 2 p.m. Orange Coast is the defending state community college water polo champion. Fullerton was runnerup.

Coach Roy Wilks' host Mounties have been seeded No. 3, while Cypress is No. 4, Santa Ana No. 5, College of Sequoias No. 6, Rio Hondo No. 7, Pasadena No. 8, L.A. Pierce No. 9, L.A. Harbor No. 10 and Saddleback No. 11.

Fullerton, Orange Coast and MSAC get byes in the opening round of play. The first games feature Rio Hondo vs. L.A. Harbor at 2 p.m., Cypress vs. Pierce at 3 p.m., COS vs. Pasadena at 4 p.m. and Saddleback vs. Santa Ana at 5 p.m.

Orange Coast meets the Rio Hondo-L.A. Harbor winner at 6 p.m., MSAC meets the COS-Pasadena winner at 7 p.m. and Fullerton takes on the Saddleback-Santa Ana winner at 8 p.m.

Fullerton won the tournament a year ago. MSAC, Rio Hondo and Cerritos tied for second.

MSAC will start two 1972 All-South Coast Conference selections Steve Peavler and Bill Carleton. With this pair and some top newcomers Ron Strain, a prep All-American at La Puente High two years ago, and Henry Rodriguez, who scored four goals in an 8-3 victory over Cypress last week the Mounties are contenders to unseat Fullerton as champion.

Fullerton has a trio of starters returning from last year, including All-South Coast selection Tim Harvey and Jim Freeman and Bruce Freund. The three plus two top freshmen Greg Batteich and Jeff Poulte wil lmake the Hornets tough to beat.

Although not appearing to be as sound as a year ago, Orange Coast has top returnees in Matt Wadelich, who scored the winning goal in the Southern California championships in 1972, and Doug Franom and Preston Hobbie.

Santa Ana features top players in Jeff Krongard, Galen Keeler and Steve Bunting, while Rio Hondo will send a trio of talented tankmen into the fray with Paul Milward, Gene Custerborden and Glenn Porter.

Roger fills 12th position for IROC

RIVERSIDE — New USAC National Champion Roger McCluskey will drive in the International Race of Champions at Riverside International Raceway next month. His entry completes the 12-man field, one of the greatest ever assembled in racing history.

The Race of Champions is part of a big race weekend, Oct. 27-28, that features the 16th running of the Times Grand Prix.

McCluskey, 43, joins a star-studded cast from the four major branches of racing.

The rest of the field for the Race of Champions:

Formula One: Jackie Stewart, three-time world champion from Scotland, Emerson Fittipaldi, 1972 world champion from Scotland; Emerson Hulme, 1967 world champion, two-time Can-Am champion and three-time winner of the Times Grand Prix from New Zealand.

USAC: Gordon Johncock, 1972 Indianapolis 500 champ from Franklin, Ind.; Bobby Unser, winner of the Indy 500 and the USAC National title in 1968 from Albquerque, N. M.

SCCA Road Racing: Mark Donohue, 1972 Indy champ, two-time U. S. Road Racing Champion, three-time Trans-Am champ and leader of the 1973 Can-Am Series from Newton Square, Pa.; Peter Revson, 1971 Can-Am champion from Redondo Beach; George Follmer, 1972 Can-Am champ from Arcadia.

NASCAR Grand National: Richard Petty, four-time national champ from Randleman, N. C.; David Pearson, three-time national champ from Spartanburg, S. C.; Bobby Allison, 1973 Martini & Rossi Driver of the Year from Hueytown, Ala.

McCluskey, who hails from Tucson, Ariz., enjoyed a big season in 1972 when he won the California 500. But he's having an even better campaign in '73, winning the coveted USAC title.

Considered one of the most versatile drivers in USAC, he won sprint crowns in 1963 and 1964 and was the organization's stock car champion in 1969 and 1970.

McCluskey has raced in 12 of the last 13 Indy 500 races, missing only 1964 when he was shelved with a broken arm.

The format for the International Race of Champions is designed to eliminate all outside variables such as pit crews, mechanics and prerace preparation.

The dozen drivers will be in identically prepared Porche Carreras. The lone adjustment they will be allowed to make is the seat.

The drivers will compete in three separate races at Riverside with the top six finishers (determined on a point system) going on to a fourth race in February at Daytona.

At the conclusion of the first race, the winner will be placed in the last-place and start last for the second race. This inversion will hold true for all drivers in all races.

The Grand Prix, the final race of this season's Can-Am Series, will be run in two sections, a 75-mile sprint race and 125-mile championship race.

Series leader Mark Donohue has already announced his entry in the Grand Prix.

Tickets for both races are on sale at Riverside Raceway, The Times Special Events Department and all Mutual and Liberty Ticket Agencies as well as Wallich's.

Rumors about Carruthers premature

Talk that Kel Carruthers, the great Australian motorcycle racer, will retire after his final race of the season this weekend is somewhat premature.

Carruthers is already discussing his future as a testing and racing rider with officials of the Yamaha factory, the Sydney-born former world champion confided.

"Yamaha has had second thoughts," he said. "They sort of want me to keep involved in the preparation of race bikes but don't like the thought of me hurting myself.

"On the other hand, I have had some success this year, and they would like to see me continue riding if I'm going to win."

That success has been quite remarkable. To stay in top form most racers compete weekly, if not more often. Carruthers has raced only four times this year, at Daytona, Road Atlanta, Talladega and Laguna Seca road races. He scored a win at Talladega, seconds at Daytona and Road Atlanta. In the lightweight preliminary races, he was first at Atlanta, second at Laguna Seca and third at Talladega.

"I have to work harder to do some of the things I used to do automatically, with no trouble at all," Carruthers said.

One of the complications that has restricted his riding schedule is that Carruthers is in charge of preparing and maintaining the Yamaha factory road racing bikes. When he shows up at a race he has six machines to keep in good condition for the factory's other three riders.

"If I ride as well," he said, "that's eight bikes, and I only have two mechanics to help me."

You get this picture of Carruthers, running around with his leathers on, supervising work first on one motorcycle and then another, sending all the fellows out to practice and then climbing on his own machine for a couple of familiarization laps. That's the way it actually has been this season.

If the popular Aussie does continue racing it will probably also benefit the new American champion, Kenny Roberts, who has been Carruthers' protege. Carruthers evaluates the 21-year-old Californian, now in his second year as an expert rider, on the eve of the season's final road race, the Champion Spark Plug Motorcycle Classicis at Ontario Motor Speedway:

"He's a good kid. He'll make a good No. 1. He is pretty good to work with, this year particularly. He has got a lot more serious about it. He can understand problems and help sort them out.

"Some riders come in and say they have a problem with the bike, and you have to find out what it is. Kenny can give a fairly good idea what is wrong. He has developed this ability this year."

Carruthers is bullish on the future of the morotcycle in America, which currently enjoys the position of No. 1 two-wheeler market in the world but which may soon face very restrictive action by the Environmental Protection Agency, which could virtually wipe out the industry.

"There is no way (the EPA) is going to get away with it," Carruthers said. "The motorcycle industry has a better chance to meet air pollution standards than the auto industry does.

"Not too many people get pleasure out of driving anymore, because of the restrictions on it, but they get a thrill out of motorcycles. Kids in school, they have to play football and baseball because they are part of physical education, but they are more interested in motorcycle sport.

"Americans are interested in mechanical things, and a motorcycle can be a pleasure vehicle as well as transport."

The nation's most comprehensive off-road vehicle use plan for public land will go into effect on Nov. 1 in the California desert. Apparently, it makes neither the conservationists nor the recreation vehicle people happy.

That may mean it is a good plan, a compromise that will allow people to use the land they own and pay taxes to support, while preventing abuse to areas that are archeologically and ecologically priceless. That's what the U. S. Bureau of Land Management hopes, anyway.

On the other hand, the whole thing may wind up becoming a bureaucratic joke. The BLM's new land use plan is confusing to many who will be affected by it, and it could be impossible to enforce.

The plan calls for allowing open use of 7.2 per cent of California's 12 million acres of desert land, closing 4.3 per cent and putting conditions on the use of everything else.

Aubrey LeBard, president of the California Motorcycle Industry Council, guesses that 95 per cent of the areas formerly used by motorcycle and dune buggy operators will be closed to them after Nov. 1. He admits that his is an off-hand estimate, made without careful study of the plan.

Bill Templeton, range conservationist of the BLM's desert planning staff, believes that the final plan will be a workable compromise and that everybody will co-operate in its enforcement.

"I believe it will work," Templeton said. "We've been in discussion with a lot of recreation vehicle groups, and they object to parts of the plan. But they say they'd like us to change this or that, and they preface everything by saying they will support it when it is adopted.

"We are very short of personnel. It's a big desert, and we are a small agency. Our rangers are all tied up regulating off-road racing events, and we would need an appropriation from Congress to increase the patrols. We believe most everybody will co-operate. There always will be outlaws, just as there are downtown."

LeBard doesn't see it that way.

"There is no way in the world to enforce rules like that," he said. "Guys go riding on their bikes, and they don't know where they are.

"There are neither funds nor manpower to enforce restrictions, and the mood of the desert user isn't very good since the green sticker law went into effect.

The so-called "greenies" are registration stickers sold by the state to off-road vehicle owners. Revenue is supposed to finance starting and maintaining state off-road vehicle recreation parks. After more than a year of selling "greenies" the state finally opened its first park last week near Sacramento.

Industry sources claim that only a small percentage of the total off-road vehicle population has been registrated and blames widespread distrust of government by vehicle owners for failures of the "greenie" program to date.

The BLM is trying to control desert use where no control was exercised before, Templeton said. Much of the so-called controlled area will get the same amount of use it has been receiving, he believes.

"Dune buggies and motorcycles will continue using 57.7 per cent of the land by sticking to existing roads and trails," Templeton said. "What we are interested in doing is stopping the proliferation of new trails."

IRWINDALE — The veterans returned to form last week at Irwindale Raceway as they round into shape for qualifications for the National Championships to be held next month.

Action gets serious this Thursday as Speedway motorcycle riders point for the final championships qualifying session to be held at Irwindale Raceway Oct. 11.

The National Championships are to be held at Costa Mesa later in October.

IRWINDALE — Topanga's Steve Parrish will continue his drive toward the United States Racing Club claimer stock car championship in this Saturday night's competition at San Gabriel Valley Speedway in Irwindale.

Ten events of racing on the oval track will get underway at 7:30 p.m. with the grand finale figure eight race on the criss-cross course closing out the evening.

IRWINDALE — A full field of competitors has been assured for Friday evening's sportsman stock car races at San Gabriel Valley Speeday in Irwindale.

The finest sportsman stock car pilots in southern California will be on hand to take advantage of this last regular Friday night racing program as a final tune-up for the rich "Permatex Western 300" October 5 and 6.

IRWINDALE — John Paxson of Arcadia is more than just confident that his "Revell Rocket" dragster will break all quarter-mile speed records this Saturday night in Irwindale Raceway's 8th annual Grand Prix of Drag Racing—he's positive!

"There's no doubt in my mind we'll top 350 mph, deep in the four second bracket," he flatly stated. "I've already clocked 326 mph at Albuquerque and 322 in 4.80 seconds at Portland just a few weeks ago, and those runs were on 23 per cent power. Now we can go up on power."

SAN BERNARDINO — Sounds of grinding, ripping metal will echo from the Orange Show Speedway in San Bernardino this Saturday night as destruction derby comes to the Inland Empire racing oval.

Ten events of NASCAR hobby stock car racing will start off the evening's program at 7:30 p.m. on the South "E" Street speedway followed by blackout derby and destruction derby.

In blackout derby the stadium lights are turned off with only the car headlights providing light for the competitors.

CORONA — The USRC Midget Club will return to Corona Raceway's super tacky half mile oval Saturday night at 8 p.m. This is the last race before the biggest Midget Race in history hits this track Oct. 27.

The midgets, powered by Fords, V6 Buicks, and ever powerful Offy's, will be dicing with each other as they work their way through Corona's high banked two grooved turns.

CORONA— The modified division of C.A.R.A. will return to action on Corona Raceway's two groove half mile Sunday at 7:30 p.m. The modified division, pitting the late model compacts and sportsman against the early model modified coupes, put on a race that is unexcelled anywhere in Southern California.

Top drivers from all over the Southern California area will be competing for an ever growing purse. A few of the drivers who will return are: Nestor Silviera from Anaheim, driving a coupe, Jim Adams in the powerful Falcon, Don Huchingson in his quick Ford, and Jerry Jones, who will be competing in his brand coupe.

VALENCIA — More than 400 dirt-track motorcycle racers, including many of the West Coast's top-ranked professional riders, are expected to rocket into action during Sunday's "Lt. Governor Ed Reinecke Motorcross Championships," a daylong, 45-heat program to be held on the twisty and demanding Shadow Glen track at Indian Dunes Park near Saugus.

GARDENA — Rick Mears of Bakersfield, whose own triumphant return helped make the Asoct comeback of the sprint buggies a big success in August, will headline J. C. Agajanian's second late-season card this Saturday night.

The 21-year-old Mears showed his usual dominance of Ascot's twisting course with its motorcycle jump in the first joint effort of Agajanian's and the Southern California Independent Drivers' Association. He won the 50-lap sprint buggy main with ease, after qualifying first and weaving to the front in his heat.

Heair, Pineda eye title shot

LOS ANGELES — Carlos Eleta, Panamanian boxing promoter, has offered to promote a world lightweight title fight in Panama between Roberto Duran, WBA champ, and the winner of the Jimmy Heair-Tury Pineda lightweight fight scheduled for the Olympic on October 4.

Jerry Moore, Heair's manager, and Bob Schulman, Pineda's manager, revealed that they both received telegrams from Eleta with the offers to fight Duran in November.

White has completed 41 of 94 for for a 183.5 average, but has eight interceptions. OSU coach Dee Andros says White has lost his job as starting QB because he hasn't yet learned to stay in the pocket. Steve Gervais will start Saturday against Brigham Young.

No injuries in fair racing spill

POMONA — Three horses and their riders fell during the running of the third race at the fairgrounds Tuesday, and all emerged from the spectacular spill with no apparent injuries.

The accident took place on the clubhouse turn when 40-1 longshot La Sierra Mary lugged out, clipped the heels of Dawn Lark, and fell, throwing Jockey Buford Mills to the track.

Dream of Jeannie, racing directly behind La Sirra Mary, crashed to the track as jockey Rudy Rosales jumped clear. A For Us was also unable to avoid La Sierra Mary and fell, throwing jockey Robby Kilborn.

Rosales quickly moved to the outside rail, Mills crawled under the inside rail and Kilborn crawled to the outside rail, all three riders clearing the track to avoid being hit by horses pulling up after the race.

Rosales walked back to the [illegible] Mills and Kilborn were released after being examined at the track hospital. It was reported that Mills later submitted to chest x-rays after complaining of a slight pain when he took a deep breath.

Bawn's Belle, with Bill Mahorney in the saddle, won the race after breaking on top and leading all the way.

Don Pierce said good-bye twice Tuesday, once in the featured Las Madrinas Handicap as he directed Balcony's Babe to a 10-length "laugher," and again after the last race as he departed on a vacation.

Pierce, leading rider at the half-mile track in 1971 and '72, will not win that title this year, as he begins serving a five-day suspension for careless riding that resulted in a disqualification of his mount last Friday. The Pomona season ends Saturday.

The talented pilot posted his eighth victory of the meeting aboard Balcony's Babe, and that win left him one behind Jerry Lambert and two behind Mahorney. Lambert won two races Tuesday, and Mahorney won three to move into the top spot.

Balcony s Babe, who won her only previous start at Pomona three years ago, was the 1-5 favorite in the mile and one-sixteenth Las Madrinas. After Bagdari and Metropo Miss engaged in an early duel for the lead, Pierce let Balcony's Babe make her move in the second run down the backstretch. From that point on there was no doubt about the outcome.

She returned $2.60 $2.40 and $2.20 as the shortest-price winner of the meeting. Sweet Nothings finished second to pay $7.20 and $3.60, and Alota Calories was third, returning $3.00.

Balcony's Babe is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Elwood B. Johnston and Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Johnston of Chino, and they were enjoying their third stakes win of the meeting and their 22nd in Pomona history.

Pierce also was posting his 22nd career stakes win at the half-mile oval. Earlier this season he won the Bangle and Beads Stakes aboard the Johnston's Impressive Style.

Racing team displays car

POMONA —The Fort Hood Drag Racing Team will display its 1973 Dodge Charger all day Thursday at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds in Pomona.

The car, sepcially selected by Dodge-Chrysler Racing Engineering Department to race the Stock and Stock Optional Eliminator bracket, will be exhibited next to the military displays building at the Fairgrounds.

The racing team is manned by soldiers with a racing interest and established on a strictly amateur scale. The two '73 Dodges were built by the team members right on the army base at Fort Hood with no expense to the Army or taxpayers.

Royals drop doubleheader

ANAHEIM — The Pomona Royals lost a pair of games Sunday in Southern California Women's Softball League action.

The Royals were on the short end of 2-0 and 9-3 scores to the host Anaheim Gold Sox.

Pitcher Judy Dykers started both games for the Royals.

El Monte is the current leader in the standings with a 4-0 record. Mission Viejo and Anaheim share second place with 2-0 marks, and Pomona is off the pace with a 1-3 record in fifth place in the eight-team circuit.

Devil runners top Fontana

POMONA — Pomona High evened its cross country record at 1-1 Tuesday afternoon with a 21-34 decision over Fontana on the Red De course.

U.S. option for sea-level canal keeps treaty in air

PANAMA CITY (UPI) —U.S. insistence that a new Panama canal treaty be tied to an option for U.S. construction of a sea-level canal is probably the major obstacle to an accord at this time, according to sources close to the Panamanian negotiators.

Because of the inflexibility of the opposing positions on this point the negotiations begun nine years ago could drag on for several more years.

Foreign Minister Juan Antonio Tack recently indicated that Panama was in no hurry to negotiate "on the basis of the crumbs they want to feed us today."

The Panamanian Society of Architects and Engineers counselled the government to wait and be patient in order to get its way. It also urged the government not to be deluded by "economic pressures and interests" or to lose sight of "national dignity."

A pro-government columnist noted in one of his commentaries, "The United States needs to begin a new canal across Panama now. They (the United States) have the final word. They are the ones who ought to hurry up and negotiate seriously."

Official Panamanian sources suggested that the U.S. negotiators are anxious to get an agreement from Panama on the option so they have some gain to show the U.S. congress when it comes time to ratify the new treaty.

Panama holds that the sea-level canal question has no business being included in a document designed to eliminate conflicts over the administration of the present canal.

The United States has defined the kind of option it wants as the right, without commitments on its part, to increase the canal's capacity through the construction of a sea-level canal or the addition of a third set of locks to the present canal.

In a note to ex-Secretary of State William Rogers, Tack stated that Panama could never give the United States such an option.

"To speak of a right without commitment in a negotiation of this nature," Tack said, "is simply to adopt an outdated position."

Tack later told a group of foreign newsmen that Panama had commissioned the United Nations Economic Council for Latin America (Cepal) to determine the most convenient sea-level canal route for Panama's interests.

The United States has indicated it favors a route about 10 miles west of the present canal. Panama is known to prefer the idea of converting the present locks-type canal into a sea-level waterway. This route is closer to the nation's population centers.

Some Panamanian officials— not all—favor signing a separate treaty with the United States in which the United States irrevocably commits itself to build the sea-level canal. Others, however, want an all-Panamanian canal with international financing.

Some Panamanians are naturally chary of another U.S. canal in Panama. A new partnership with the United States that might extend up to 90 years does not appear to be consonant with Panama's bursting nationalism and its drift towards third-world neutrality.

This is also why Panama wants a short term for the new treaty on the present canal.

Panama Canal Company economists calculate the canal's capacity probably will be reached sometime in the last decade of this century.

Indian general finds glory fleeting thing

By LEON ANIEL

NEW DELHI (UPI) —The deep malaise into which India has sunk since the heady days following its stunning victory over Pakistan may explain the fate of an Indian fighting man with the unlikely name of Sam.

After leading the Indian Army to that victory which required just 14 days in December of 1971, it seemed that Sam Manekshaw could do no wrong.

On the eve of his retirement, a grateful government made him its first and only field marshal.

The action was widely applauded by Indians who were delighted by the fact that their nation had suddenly and unquestionably become the dominant one on the subcontinent.

It is true that Manekshaw's elevation raised a few eyebrows of those who wondered why the world's most populous democracy needed a field marshal. But no one objected strenuously. After all, people said, not only was he a hell of a soldier, Sam also was a nice guy.

The months immediately after the war were happy ones for both India and Manekshaw.

Despite the enormous cost of the war, the government still was boasting that, thanks to the so-called "Green Revolution," India had achieved self-sufficiency in food production.

Indians were genuinely proud of siring the new nation of Bangladesh, which until the war had been Pakistan's eastern wing.

Manekshaw, basking in earned glory, made speeches, met the foreign press and conducted himself generally like a man with the world in a jug and the stopper in his hand.

Then, with last year's drought, things began to go sour for India. Prices skyrocketed. Unemployment rose.

At the same time, there were indications that Manekshaw might be in trouble, too.

The government saw fit to deny that Manekshaw had fallen from grace for making remarks considered by some to be indiscreet.

A defense ministry spokesman said the government is under no obligation to provide Manekshaw with a house, car and personal staff. There had been press reports that Manekshaw had been deprived of these prerequisites for some remarks he was said to have made during a trip to London.

There were rumors that some Indian leaders were irked because Manekshaw made some unflattering remarks about Indian politicians in conversations with British military colleagues.

Manekshaw is now in South India where he is talking not at all for publication.

Boy has 2 problems bugging him

By JEAN ADAMS

QUESTION AT 15: (Q.) I am 15 and a boy and have two problems that have been bugging me. One, how does one know when he becomes a man? This is how I feel. I am on a tall, narrow wall and I am about to fall. Manhood is on one side and boyhood is on the other. How do I make sure I fall on the right side?

Two, how does one feel when he's in love? I mean how does he act, feel, think, etc. How will I REALLY know when I'm in love with a girl. — Waiting in Pennsylvania.

(A.) Your questions are much more imaginative than those I usually get.

Answer 1: Each day you are becoming more a man. But now and all your life the child will occasionally emerge. This should happen less and less as you grow more and more mature. You can encourage your development into manhood by handling each day in your life and the tasks in it in the best and most responsible way you know how. Do not be afraid of falling. You won't.

Answer 2: I promise you that real love is a very beautiful feeling and that you will KNOW it when you experience it.

WRONG GIRL: (Q.) I told Eileen I thought we could really make it together. I told her I would call her back to get her answer. But when I called the line was busy and I didn't call anymore.

I guess the truth is I didn't want Eileen at all. What I wanted was to make Margaret jealous. Margaret really gets mad when she sees me with some other girl. I really got mad last week when I saw another dude over at Margaret's house.

Please tell me what to do. I am 15 and Margaret and Eileen are both 13. — No Answer in DMC.

(A.) What you started to do would have been unfair to Eileen, Margaret and yourself. So drop it.

If you like Margaret, try to win her friendship. But at her age she should not be dating you or any boy, and you should not look upon her as a serious girl friend.

The 19-miel dike enclosing the Zuider Zee, completed in 1932, required 56 million cubic yards of clay and sand and additional tons of heavy stones—enough to build more tha 18 pyramids like the Great Pyramid of Cheops. Dutch engineers completed the massive project in five years.

Until a stage coach toll road was built in 1874, the only access to California's Yosemite Valley was on foot or horseback.

Erma Bombeck

I didn't decide to become a "woman of mystery" until the class prophecy in my high school yearbook left a blank space behind my name. It seemed like as good a time as any.

When I began the column I was careful to reveal only what I wanted people to know. For instance, only a few close friends realize I use waxed dental floss . . . how I used to nip at the vanilla when the children were teething . . . and how I once wrote a fan letter to Don Knotts. Privacy is important to me.

Since I started to lecture all that has changed. It's like facing the CIA in your underwear.

After one lecture, a woman raised her hand and asked, "What zodiac sign were you born under? When I told her she smiled a little crooked smile (maybe it was gas) and said, "I knew it," and sat down. Then she nudged her companion in the ribs and said "Didn't I tell you, Pauline?"

I couldn't stand it, "What do you mean by a crack like that?" I pursued.

She arose again and announced, "I knew you were oversexed and your feet hurt and your sign just proved it."

In spite of the fact that the two traits didn't even go together the audience began to laugh, the waitresses fell apart, and my husband . . . that fool laughed until he got sick.

After that I felt my whole personality was being undressed. Perfect strangers would inform me, "You hate New Year's Eve, don't you, because your sign can't stand noise," or "Watch your pocketbook between the 10th and 19th. You can't help yourself. Oh, and lay off the cucumbers until you're on the cusp."

I couldn't fight them. When I signed a book at a lecture, a woman examined my handwriting and said, "You love animals and parades but somewhere in your bureau drawers are quilts, needlepoints, sweaters and mending that have been there for ten years. Luvie, you never finish anything."

I wanted to finish her, but another lady came up and said, "Watch it, honey, you're doing it again."

"Doing what?" I asked nervously.

"Crossing your legs. In body English that's very revealing. How long have you been married?"

I bit my lip and began to fiddle with my hair.

She nudged her friend, "See that, Grace, didn't I tell you?"

My mystique was dying before my eyes. It was only a matter of time before she would discover that my feet were killing me.

Cat can't win them all so he has a problem

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Problem: Captain, a four year old, extremely male cat. He's a problem because, while I'm sure he wins most of his fights, he does pick up wounds from some of them and a lot of these wounds become infected. After I had taken him in to the doctor a dozen times for treatment of these infected bite wounds, the doctor strongly recommended we have his gears stripped. My husband won't permit this so we are continually faced with this very expensive problem of cat bites, infections and abscesses. Can you recommend some other preventatives? THE operation is out. — R. E.

Dear R. E.: The only failsafe system for preventing his bite wounds would be to keep him home. "House arrest" would probably be the Captain's term for it. Once a wound has occurred, if it is noted immediately, proper treating, which includes removing hair directly around and certainly any within the wound, may help to prevent infection, too, though this is of less importance than a thorough cleansing.

Some sulfa drugs or antibiotics may be used occasionally to prevent rather than treat infection systemically (or by injection). Since these drugs can themselves cause illness and because they don't necessarily prevent infection anyway, they can't logically be recommended for routine use. Your own veterinarian might give you some to have on hand for very occasional use under certain specified conditions.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Homer, my hog-nosed snake, is real friendly with me but he looks scarey when he tries to bluff strangers. He has learned to like petting and I am very fond of him now. The only trouble is he has only eaten one small frog since I have had him. I felt so sorry for the frogs I haven't been able to give him any more. Is there anything else I could feed him? I wouldn't have to feel so sorry about?—V.M.

Dear V. M.: It depends a little on how far your sympathies go. Hognoses are known to eat insects and worms. If you can steel yourself to let Homer have a go at these he might be able to hold on. Since he would also enjoy such delicacies as salamanders, small snakes and lizards, you might be able to train him eventually to eat properly presented slivers of meat—in the fortunate, if unlikely, circumstances that you happen to have some left over . . .

Europeans feel U.S. may be holding bag in oil crisis

BRUSSELS (UPI) —When it comes to the hardships which a world energy crisis will cause, President Nixon has said that Europe and America are "all in the same boat." Not all Europeans agree.

The feeling is growing in Europe that America's close ties with Israel may leave the United States holding the bag when the full-scale crisis hits, probably later in the 1970s. According to this theory, Europe, with its weaker ties with Israel, will find it easier to persuade Arabs to keep the oil flowing.

European Common Market officials say a policy of every man for himself is hampering not only their attempt to build a common trans-Atlantic energy front but to get some unity on energy among the European nations themselves.

Another attempt is to be made this autumn, possibly in late October, when energy ministers of the nine Common Market nations meet to debate a European energy policy drawn up by the Common Market's executive commission. A similar meeting earlier this year failed and hope for success this fall is not high now.

At the moment, Europe is much more vulnerable than the United States to Arab pressure. Europe relies on oil for 60 per cent of its energy and threequarters of this oil comes from the Middle East. The impact of this fact of life on European foreign policies was recognized by Henri Simonet, the Common Market's energy commissioner, when he noted that "oil is 90 per cent politics."

Simonet is among the officials who believe that the Arab control of the world's oil gives them the power of "blackmail" over the Western nations. What he fears is that if the Western nations do not form a united front, the Arabs will be able to play one off against the other, shoving prices even higher— and forcing each nation, one by one, to abandon Israel.

Accordingly, Simonet's staff recommended earlier this year that Europe, Japan and the United States get together "to cushion the impact of a crisis" and to prevent "mutual overbidding and confrontation." At the same time, Simonet said European nations should create an oil policy, including some control over oil companies, and should ensure their own "stability of supplies" by striking trade deals with oil-producing nations.

Energy ministers, meeting here in May, did nothing but say that an oil policy might be a good idea. They asked Simonet to come up with plans for such a policy by the end of the year—ignoring the fact that he had already done so. Simonet's hopes for negotiating unity with Washington and Tokyo were shelved for at least six months.

The May failure was blamed by other delegations on French unwillingness to share its strong position in Algeria and Iraq with its Common Market partners, let alone the United States.

But a U.S. government report since then indicates growing European disillusionment with the idea of an oil alliance with Washington.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), an investigatory arm of Congress, said European leaders told it that "tying itself to the United States may not be in Europe's best interest if the Arab states withhold oil because of the U.S. stand on Israel."

THAT'S A BENCH — Who ever heard of a lowly park bench being a snob? An "old fashioned" park bench in the downtown area of Spokane has been looking down its nose this week at a newly installed bench. The sleek new benches are part of a beautification project to spruce up the downtown business area.

Pacific Phone profit increases by $11½ million

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Pacific Telephone Co. has reported earnings of $72.5 million for the three months ending Aug. 31, compared with $61.0 million in the same period a year earlier.

PTGT profits for the year ending Aug. 31 were $264.1 million, compared with $192.9 million the previous year.

Although the company earnings for the year were $71 million above last year, the announcement said that the figure "actually represents a decline" in profit because the earnings reported in 1972 would have been higher.

World Bank aid lagging --McNamara

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — World Bank President Robert S. McNamara warned the world's richest nations recently that tardiness in paying their bills may bankrupt the bank's program for aid to the poorest countries.

Conference officials said McNamara's criticism was pointed most of all at the United States, the biggest contributor.

McNamara's speech opened the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank—the first held in Africa and, with 126 nations represented, the largest ever. There are some 3,500 delegates and guests.

McNamara said an end to the bank's International Development Association would be a "disaster." But he said the IDA may be forced to close down by next June 30 unless the wealthy nations pledge enough money to keep it going.

The IDA is the so-called "soft loan" arm of the World Bank. While the bank gives international loans at commercial rates, the association specializes in loans to the poorest nations at minimal rates. Last year it loaned $1.357 billion to 80 nations—about 40 per cent of total World Bank loans.

IDA's new three-year period begins next June 30. At that time, it must have pledges from donor countries—totalling $1.5 billion per year — to give it the "right to commit" money for three years in advance.

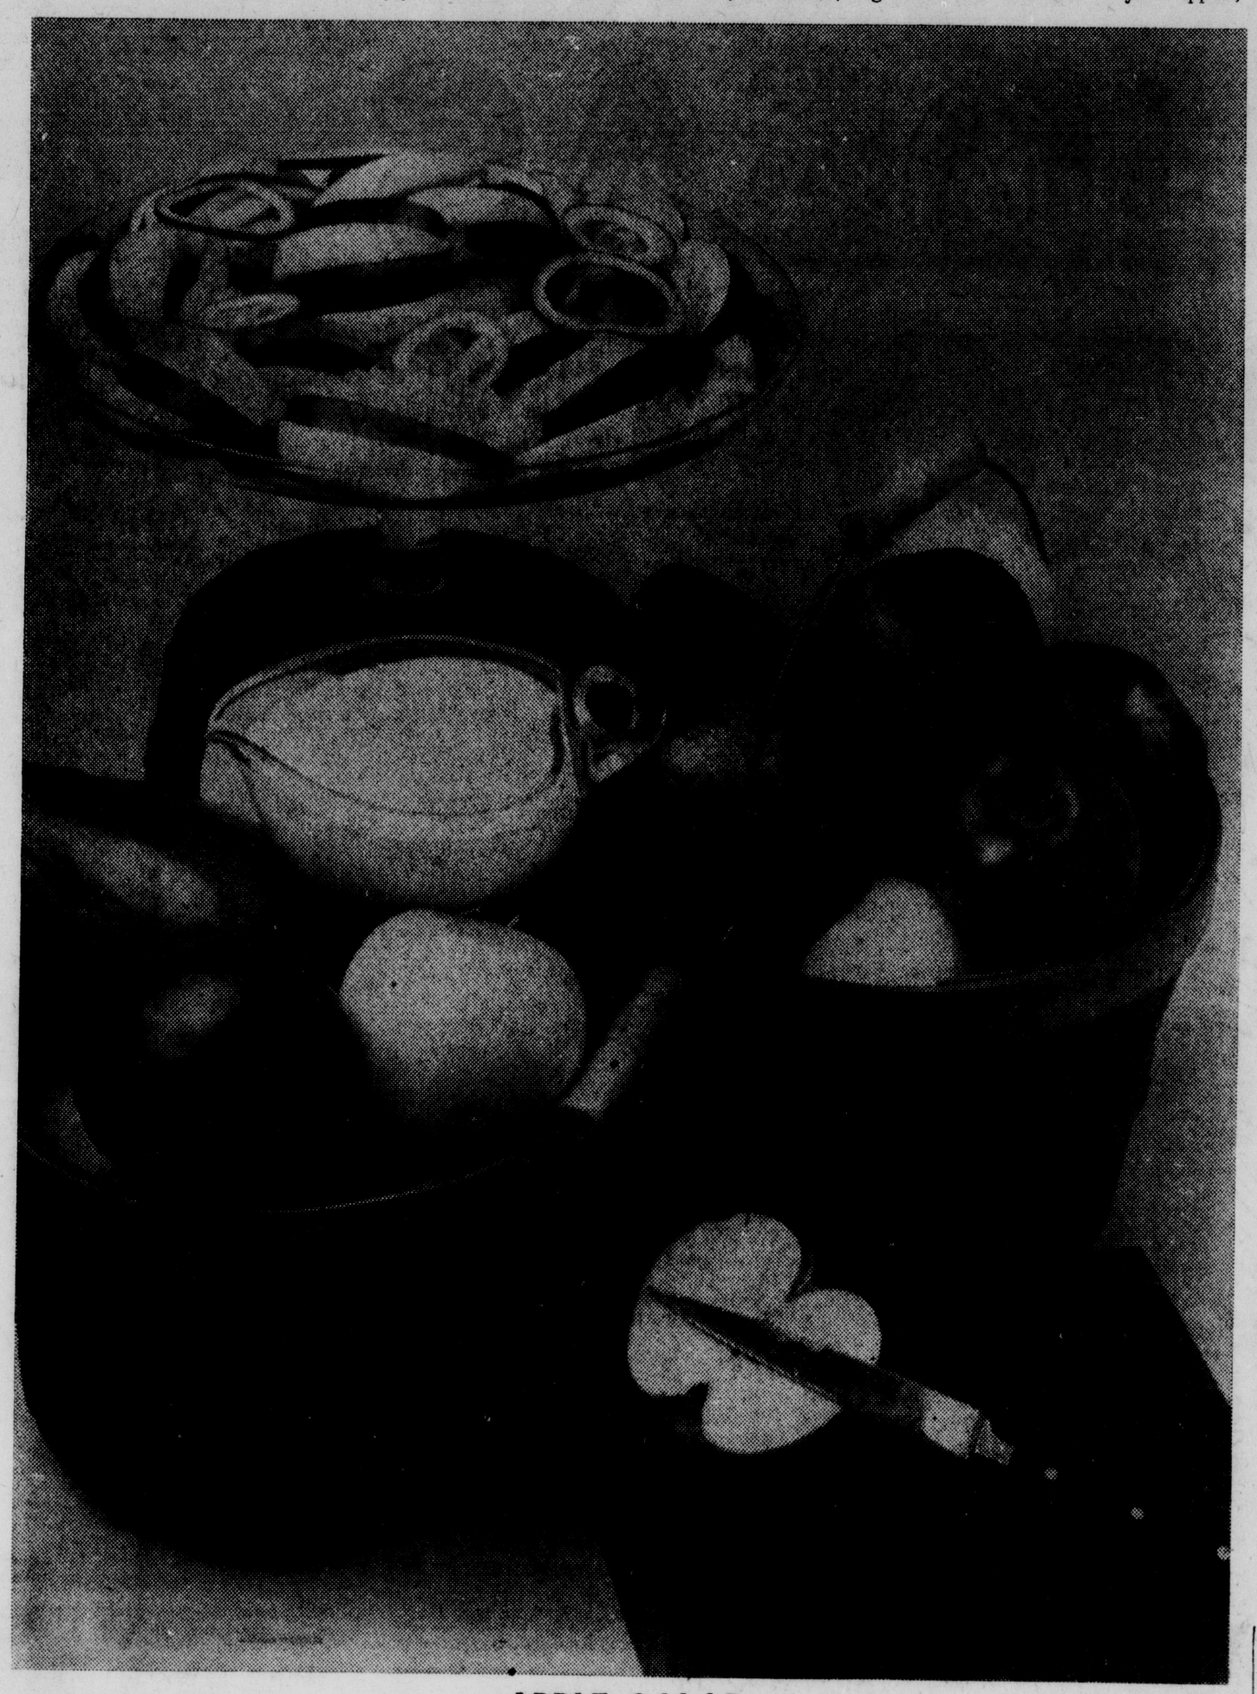
One of the special joys of autumn—apple harvest

The apple harvest is one of the special joys that autumn brings. This year, perhaps more than ever, we rejoice to see the new crop appear in markets. For, at the peak of the season, apples are lower in price and especially crisp and full of flavor.

Enjoy them out of hand. Bake and cook with them. Use them in all kinds of ways to make the most of autumn and winter meals. Apple salads are, of course, right at the top of the list of ways to use this fruit.

Such salads can be very simple. Never forget the classic Waldorf — just apples, celery, walnuts and real mayonnaise. But, to open the fall season — and to enjoy all winter long — try salads with an unusual flavor flair, too. Team fresh apples with other fruits. Try them with pears, dates or avocados. And, for flavor accent, spice lightly with crystallized ginger or ground nutmeg.



APPLE SALAD

Given here are 3 gourmet-type apple salads. All are dressed with creamy textured real mayonnaise thinned to pourable or easy tossing consistency with such flavorful ingredients as yogurt, sherry or grapefruit juice.

FRUIT SALAD SERVICE

1 grapefruit
2 red skinned apples
cored, thinly sliced lengthwise
2 yellow skinned apples, cored, thinly sliced lengthwise
1 avocado, peeled, seeded, sliced
Romaine lettuce
1 red onion, thinly sliced, separated into rings
2 ribs celery, thinly sliced
2-3rds cup real mayonnaise
3 tablespoons grapefruit juice
1 teaspoon crystallized ginger, chopped

Peel and section grapefruit reserving juice and sprinkle apples and avocado with grapefruit juice. Line a serving plate or flat bowl with lettuce. Arrange apples, avocado, grapefruit, onion and celery in sections on plate. Prepare dressing by mixing mayonnaise, grapefruit juice and ginger. Serve with salad. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

APPLE AVOCADO SALAD

3 medium apples, peeled, cored, chopped
1 avocado, peeled and cubed
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup diced celery
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup chopped dates
½ cup real mayonnaise
½ cup plain yogurt
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Sprinkle apple and avocado with lemon juice. Toss with celery, walnuts and dates. Mix together mayonnaise, yogurt, salt and pepper. Toss with salad mixture, chill. Makes 6 (1-cup) servings.

AUTUMN HARVEST SALAD

2 apples, cubed (2 cups)
2 pears, cubed (1½ cups)
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup thinly sliced celery
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoon dry sherry
1 cup real mayonnaise
4 cups crisp torn lettuce
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Toss apples and pears with lemon juice. Add celery and salt; chill. Stir wine into real mayonnaise and add to salad serving toss with lettuce. Sprinkle with nutmeg.

Chicken to rescue of meatless menus

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Chicken is more plentiful than beef and is less expensive as a source of good protein. In many ways it is favored over beef for those who fear heart attacks and obesity.

Poultry fat is half polyunsaturated and half saturated, thereby making it preferable in a lower cholesterol diet. Furthermore, chicken contains fewer calories than beef, making it more desirable for those watching their weight.

Cooking experts of the National Broiler Council prepared these basic instructions:

FRIED:

Roll chicken pieces in flour seasoned with favorite herbs. Some good choices are thyme or tarragon — one-half teaspoon per chicken; or paprika — 1 teaspoon. Add coated chicken, skin side down, to one-half-inch of oil and fry over medium heat. Cook uncovered for 15 to 25 minutes on each side. Drain on paper towels.

BROILED:

Sprinkle chicken halves, quarters or pieces with desired seasonings; for example, 1 teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and one-half teaspoon tarragon, per chicken. Broil, skin side down, for 20 to 30 minutes. Turn and broil 15 to 25 minutes longer. Have chicken 3 to 6 inches from heat in gas range and 6 to 9 inches from heat in electric range. If desired, baste chicken with melted butter, margarine or salad oil several times while cooking.

SIMMERED:

Place one chicken in saucepan with 2 cups of water, 1 small onion, sliced, 3 celery tops, 1 teaspoon salt and one-fourth teaspoon pepper. bring to a boil. Cover tightly and simmer 1 hour or until tender. Remove from heat; strain broth and refrigerate. When chicken is cool, remove meat from skin and bones. Slice for sandwiches and use chunks for casserole or salad.

ROAST:

Prepare chicken by sprinkling neck and body cavities with 1 teaspoon salt. Hook wing tip onto back to hold neck skin and the legs together, then to tail. Cook chickens weighing 1 and one-half to 2 pounds at 400 degrees for 35-40 minutes per pound. Larger chickens need 30 minutes per pound at 375 degrees. Increase total roasting time by 15 minutes when chicken is stuffed. When done, drumstick meat should feel soft when pressed between fingers and legs should twist easily out of thigh joint.

SKILLET:

Brown chicken pieces on all sides in heated butter or margarine. Add 1 and one-half cups liquid, such as chicken broth or tomato juice. For some great flavor combinations, add 1 and one-half cups of mushrooms, sliced zucchini, broccoli flowerets or cubed pineapple per chicken. Cover and cook for 20 to 30 minutes or until chicken is tender.

Consumer preference for white or yellow-skinned chicken explains the color variations in different geographic regions, according to the National Broiler Council. Consumers in the Northeast, for instance, prefer yellower chickens, Chickens derive their yellow color from feed with higher levels of yellow corn, alfalfa, corn gluten meal or marigold petals.

FRESH IDEAS ABOUT PRODUCE

We have our own ideas about starting fresh.

Penny for penny, "fresh" is your best buy. All fresh fruits, of course, come ready to eat and enjoy at any time. But vegetables? Well, the fact is, no matter how you look at vegetables—nutrition, taste, economy, and yes—convenience, too—Alpha Beta feels it pays to start fresh!

We have our own ideas about what fresh is.

While many other markets have their produce delivered only 4 or 5 times a week, Alpha Beta delivers a fresh 6 times a week! What does this mean to you? It means that often the beautiful produce that was growing in the field yesterday is at Alpha Beta today.

We have our own ideas about answering your questions.

Alpha Beta's expert produce men do more than just keep the department spic 'n span fresh. They're happy to give you helpful tips on choosing fruits and vegetables...on keeping them fresh in your home...and, of course, on how to prepare them.

We have our own ideas about variety.

Where many other markets limit your produce to the same old expected things, Alpha Beta has a fantastic variety...from all the "old standbys" to such little known, yet wonderfully delicious foods as jicama and seedless cucumbers. And, interestingly enough, unusual items often cost less than the well known ones. They're there for convenience, sure. Also for savings. And that, after all, is what Alpha Beta is all about.

The times call for fresh thinking. We're doing it at Alpha Beta... the store that invariably keeps good its promise: wherever you're shopping now, you'll like the total better at Alpha Beta.

Get the most value from vegetables

A major worry of most families is the soaring cost of food. Yet we must eat. Therefore ways to get 100 per cent value out of what we buy takes on major importance.

New Jersey, called the Garden State, produces quantities of top-quality fruits and vegetables. For which reason, the New Jersey State Department of Agriculture strives to encourage greater use of vegetables and suggests substituting them more often for the costly beef and pork.

Chris Irvin, division of markets, says: "Vegetables add flavor and variety, plus nutrition to our meals. Unfortunately vegetables often get little attention in meal planning and preparation

"This results in a vicious circle: Peoole believe they don't like vegetables so they are careless about how they cook them. Because vegetables are carelessly prepared people don't like them."

The following hints for cooking vegetables to get full value and flavor are from the New Jersey State Department of Agriculture at Trenton. Keep in mind that many vegetables, if well presented, are just as good served cold as hot. Or that the old-fashioned and once highly popular "vegetable plate" with an egg in the center, makes a delicious no-meat dish.

NEVER OVER-COOK vegetables. Every known vegetable is better undercooked or cooked until just tender.

USE AS LITTLE water as possible to retain flavor and nutrients. Always drain thoroughly and save vegetable liquor for soups.

PARE OR CUT fresh vegetables just before cooking to preserve essential nutrients.

USE A SHARP knife to cut vegetables. There will be fewer bruises and less loss of valuable nutrients.

DO NOT USE soda in cooking vegetables. It makes them mushy and flavorless and can destroy nutrients.

USE A TIGHT-FITTING lid to steam cook green vegetables.

KEEP HEAT low so water boils gently. Otherwise, steam will escape around edges of pan.

IF USING SALT, allow one-half to 1 teaspoon salt for each six servings of vegetables.

STRONGLY FLAVORED vegetables such as cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts and turnips should be cooked in uncovered pan and not over-cooked. Add additonal water as needed to prevent burning.

STEAMING VEGETABLES is better for white, yellow and red vegetables than for green vegetables. Place vegetables on a rack over boiling water and cook with a tight cover. This method will take longer than when boiling the vegetables.

BUTTER OR MARGARINE are vegetables' best friend. Salt and freshly ground pepper are next. All other seasonings should be complementary, not overwhelming!

THE SAUCES most frequently used for vegetables are hollandaise, mornay, a lemony egg sauce, cheese sauce and vinaigrette (an oil, vinegar and herb sauce.)

Antifreeze shortage predicted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Add antifreeze for automobiles to the items that may be scarce this winter.

Rep. William, L. Hungate, D-Mo., said Monday an antifreez shortage is predicted and thus antifreeze products should be included in any "emergency petroleum allocation" legislation.

In a letter to Torbert H. MacDonald, chairman of a subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Hungate said, "Major producers tell us that their producing capacity is only 80 per cent of last year, and that the demand for these products is increasing at the rate of some 5 per cent per year."

"Some suppliers are already allocating their supplies on a pro rata basis," he added, "but others have simply cut off certain of their customers completely."

Peachy tips to help the home canner

This fall a surpising number of people will be taking to home preserving.

Of all the fresh fruit being put up, fresh peaches are, as always, the most popular. They can, freeze and jam beautifully — and their salad — to main course — to dessert versatility and fresh flavor are little diminished in the process

If you plan to join the legions of the home canners this fall, here are a few tips from the home economists at the Fresh Peach Advisory Board of California, one of the nation's top peach-producing states.

Always select firm, ripe peaches. To peel a peach, dip into boiling water for about 30 seconds, then into cold. The skins will slip right off; use an ascorbic acid mixture to keep the peaches fresh looking.

In canning peaches, still the most popular way of preserving them, experts prefer the hot pack method, followed by the boiling water bath procedure. As a rule of thumb, one to one and one-half pounds of fresh peaches make one pint of canned peaches.

For freezing peaches, either the Syrup Pack or the Dry Sugar Pack methods are good. Freezing eliminates the sterilized jars and the hot stove aspects of preserving. Frozen peaches will keep for about a year in the freezer and for three months in the refrigerator frozen food compartment.

In jamming and conserving peaches, do it in small batches. The jam mixture must be watched quite closely and stirred frequently to prevent sticking and scorching. Regular small-size canning jars and sealing lids eliminate the old difficulties with paraffin tops.

For detailed canning, freezing and jamming instructions, consult a good up-to-date cookbook. And do follow the instructions carefully. But don't be afraid to experiment in order to add variety to these basic methods. Add a little brandy, or cloves, or cinnamon stick, or mint to your peach canning syrup. Try freezing fresh peaches with other fruits in your own favorite combinations. Turn peach jam into delicious peach conserve by adding raisins, nuts, pineapple, what have you.

Home preserving can be a gratifying experience for the home preserver: The results are satisfying and delicious; the procedures are relatively simple and the work — really quite easy.

Broccoli, bread are stretchers

Many families are taking a new interest in casserole dishes these days. A ham dish that stretches expensive meat with broccoli and bread crumbs plus savory touches such as slivered almonds has more than taste to recommend it. As with all dishes, it is important to consider the price per serving and not the price per most expensive item in the dish for a more realistic approach to meal planning.

CHELSEA HAM CASSEROLE

¾ cup liquid margarine
½ cup flour
2½ cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
2 10-ounce packages frozen chopped broccoli, cooked, drained
2 cups chopped ham
1-3rd cup slivered almonds, toasted
2 cups soft bread crumbs

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Make white sauce using one-half cup liquid margarine, flour, milk and salt. Stir in broccoli, ham and nuts; place in 2-quart casserole. Toss bread crums with one-quarter cup liquid margarine; spoon onto top of casserole. Bake at 350 degrees, 25 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Ulysses S. Grant was the 18th president of the United States and the first president from Ohio. He was elected in 1868 and served two terms.

This quick skillet dish can double up

By AILEEN CLAIRE

A quick skillet dish may double as hors d'oeuvres or be served with hot buttered noodles for a main course. It includes such tasty tidbits as sliced mushrooms, sweet Italian sausage and frankfurters, small white onions and cherry tomatoes. A Skillet Mushroom Medley takes very little time to prepare and may be done in advance and kept hot.

SKILLET MUSHROOM MEDLEY

½ pound fresh mushrooms or 1 can (6 to 8 ounce) sliced mushrooms
1 pound sweet Italian sausage
½ pound frankfurters
1 can (1 pound) whole small white onions, drained
1 green pepper, cut into strips
8 cherry tomatoes
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms or drain canned mushrooms; set aside. Cut into sausages and frankfurters into 1-inch chunks. In a large skillet saute sausage until well browned, about 10 minutes. Add frankfurters and saute 5 minutes. Stir in reserved mushrooms, onions, green pepper, tomatoes, salt and black pepper. Cook and stir for about 8 minutes or until vegetables are hot. Serve from skillet with toothpicks as an hors d'oeuvre. If desired, serve with a bowl of mustard. May be served with hot buttered noodles for main dish. Makes 8 to 10 appetizer portions or 4 servings.

Coast Guard testing new oil scooper

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Coast Guard has began testing a new oil recovery machine it says can scoop up 60,000 gallons of the goo in an hour.

The two week tow tests on San Francisco Bay will determine if the catamaran-type unit can live up to the Coast Guard's requirements of working in five-foot waves and in winds up to 20 knots.

The unit's four rubber pontoons were inflated recently on Yerba Buena Island and then towed to the cutter Blackhawk, a buoy tender.

The heart of the unit is a paddlewheel mounted crosswise between the four pontoons connected to an aluminum hull.

Within the hull are a diesel an oil pump, and air pump engine for the paddlewheel, and an electrical system.

The unit was trucked to Yerba Buena Coast Guard Base from Sunnyvale, where is was built by the Lockheed Missiles & Space Co.

Emigrating from the Old Country, 19th century Finns brought their saunas (hot air bathing) to the melting pot of America.

Light evening meals can cut food budget

One businesswoman explains, "My husband and I, working with different organizations, now eat heavier meals at lunchtime in our cafeterias or lunch rooms, making a light meal at night sufficient. Then we have more time for outdoor activity. Our two young children get their large meal at noon and their night eating is light, too."

Eileen Taylor, a government social science analyst, admits that steaks are quick, easy to cook and always desirable. But she finds she uses them considerably less in these days of inflation.

"Casserole dishes using chopped meat take far longer to prepare, of course. I prepare them in the morning, place them in the refrigerator and then cook them for about one-half hour in the evening. I try to go without onions right now since they are almost prohibitive in cost due to a combination of disasters."

She leans toward meat alternatives such as cheeses, milk dishes, dry beans and peas, fish — all used in different ways to cut bills.

"But as so many correspondents write, they have tried all these things as much as their families will stand. They cannot go any further, they insist.

"These women must go to their cookbooks again.

"They can find new ways to extend meat that will entice their husbands and children. Meat is so positive an idea in our civilization that we almost cannot live without some meat as often as possible.

"Some women are baking more, and using unprocessed and natural foods. One wrote us a letter saying, 'I'm going back to cake mixes. I find frozen and store cakes too expensive.'"

What are today's convenience foods? Actually, canned peas are a convenience food. So, of course, are cake mixes, But today frozen products ready for the oven, processed potato flakes, frozen complete dinners — all these come under that heading and you pay more for their built-in service. The question is, can you afford it during our rising inflation?

"Women who work — and they are legion — cannot take time when they get home to prepare many foods from scratch. So they will have to use their ingenuity about what to eat.

"Women who don't work can use many foods like raw potatoes, casseroles of beans and macaroni and cheese. These take time but they save food money," she concludes.

Judge extends deadline on wiener labels

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker signed an order Aug. 8 permitting processors of hot dogs and cooked sausage until Jan. 1 to use up available supplies of existing labels before complying with new U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) labeling regulations. The new regulations were to become fully effectively Sept. 7.

According to Judge Parker's ruling, processors may make use of present stocks of labels until Jan. 1. Also, any firm which runs out of existing supplies of labels before Jan. 1 may order an additional supply of old labels before being required to use labels meeting the new federal regulations.

On June 5, USDA announced new, more descriptive labeling requirements designed to help consumers distinguish between hot dogs made of various ingredients. However, since that time, processors have written to Judge Parker presenting information on label procurement problems and requested a hearing on an extension of the Sept. 7 deadline.

USDA officials said the new federal labeling regulations, onec fully implemented, will require processors to label hot dogs and other cooked sausages in one of three ways:

— Products made only from skeletal meat must be labeled with their generic names, such as "frankfurter," "bologna," or "knockwurst." If all the meat is from one particular species, the product must be labeled accordingly—for example, "beef frankfurter."

— Products made with meat byproducts—heart, tripe, tongue, etc.—must be labeled as, for example, "frankfurters with byproducts" or "franks with variety meats."

— Products made with up to 3.5 per cent of binders—such as nonfat dry milk, cereal or dried whole milk, or 2 per cent isolated soy protein—also must be clearly labeled, such as "franks with byproducts, nonfat dry milk added."

Under the new regulations, USDA will also officially recognize other names such as "hot dog," "frank," and "furter." Until now, federally inspected meat processors have only been allowed to use the terms "frankfurter" and "wiener" on their labels.

McGovern will concentrate on Senate--wife

AURORA, N.Y. (UPI) — Eleanor McGovern said that her husband is concentrating on winning reelection to the Senate next year and is not planning to run again for president in 1976.

"He has no intention of running again in the next presidential election," the wife of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said.

Mrs. McGovern told a Wells College audience that her role in her husband's re-election drive would be as active as her participation in his race as the 1972 Democratic candidate for president.

She said she joined in the campaigning last year because, "it's my country and I have strong beliefs about how it should be run."

"A new tone was set in the last campaign, primarily because of the new role of women," she said. "It was wonderful being a woman in politics."

Nixon backer given thanks by First Lady

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dwight Dobbs put up three 12-by125-foot billboards out in Urbana, Ill., bearing pictures of President Nixon and the words: "I have more faith in this man . . . than I have in any of his accusers . . . especially ths press."

He did it, he said, "to give the President a lift."

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the President's wife, Pat, wrote a letter of thanks to Dobbs. Warren said he phoned Dobbs at the President's request to thank him.

Fruit Cream Waffles for an occasion

There is growing interest in preparing a dish from scratch. Waffles make an ideal week-end offering when the family and guests have time to relax at the breakfast table. Fruit Cream Waffles may become one of the male chef's specialties for such occasions.

FRUIT CREAM WAFFLES

2¼ cups unsifted flour
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 package active dry yeast
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons corn oil margarine
3 eggs, separated
Corn oil margarine
Preserves (strawberry, raspberry)
Dairy sour cream

In a large bowl thoroughly mix flour, sugar, salt and undissolved active dry yeast. Combine milk and 2 tablespoons corn oil margarine in a saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquid is very warm (120-130 degrees). Margarine does not need to melt.

Gradually add to dry ingredients and beat 5 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Cover. Let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk; about 45 minutes. Beat egg whites until soft peaks hold; set aside.

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Stir egg yolks into batter, then fold in egg whites. Let stand at room temperature 15 minutes.

For each waffle pour enough batter onto preheated waffle iron to spread within 1-inch from edge. Bake until steaming stops and waffle is done. Serve with corn oil margarine, preserves and sour cream. Makes about 24 four and one-half inch waffles.

TOULOUSE, France (UPI) — Education officials have announced the opening a new university exclusively for elderly citizens with an enrollment of 1,000 students.

The officials said Sunday the institution, the Universite du Troisieme Age (University for the Third Age), offers nondegree courses in such subjects as How to Grow Old Gracefully, The Swedish Socialist Model, Canada, European Boom and Traditional England Faces Immigration Problems.

Officials said the average age of the student body was 70. They said tuition was about $4.60 a year.

A recipe for those not counting their calories

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Everywhere you go these days you're bombarded with America's fascinating love-hate relationship with the waistline. Hit the neighborhood cocktail party and those bores not talking about Watergate are touting you on their latest diet, swearing eternal fealty to Dr. Stillman.

Pop into a bookstore, and the shelves are fairly creaking with volumes on the newest fad diet. All sorts of doctors are pledging to make you thin. Each has a different method, and each thinks the otherers are crazy. You can keep yourself so broke buying the latest diet books that you will not have any money left for food — a sure bet you'll lose weight.

Switch on a television set. Either there is a gal in leotards grunting out numbers while she's twisted into pretzel shapes, presumably showing thousands of housewives the way to a firmer bustline. Or there is a panel show with doctors plugging their diet books and arguing that only theirs is effective.

I don't know how all this nonsense affects you. It drives me to gluttony.

Last weekend I engaged in some of the most pleasurable gluttony imaginable. It added five pounds and Lord knows how many inches, but it was so delicious that I enjoyed every forkful and laughed over my German beer at the good doctors trying to get rich over Americans' loathing of excess lard.

The recipe is called choucroute garnie. It is a speciality of the Alsatian region of France, where the natives take their eating seriously. After the theater in Paris, patrons head directly to Alsatian restaurants.

Simply, it is garnished sauerkraut. What you garnish it with is up to you. I suggest as many varieties of pork as you can fit in the pot. Here's a sample:

Spare ribs, a thick slice of ham, loin pork chops, a slab of bacon, several different kinds of Alsatian and German cooking sausages (I used smoked and unsmoked bratwursts and knockwursts.

Take a deep pot and rub the bottom with a tiny bit of lard. Take two small onions and stick them with cloves, and split two carrots. Both vegetables go on the bottom.

Now add a layer of sauerkraut, at least one inch thick. If you use canned kraut, drain it thoroughly and wash it several times in cold water. Press it lightly atop the carrots and onions and sprinkle with a half a dozen juniper berries and a dozen coarsely ground peppercorns.

Now comes the layering of the meats. Place the spareribs, the pork chops, the ham and the sausages (except the knockwurst) atop the layer of sauerkraut. Then add another layer of sauerkraut, making sure there is a couple of inches of pot at the top.

For each pound of sauerkraut (a large 1-lb. 11-ounce can will yield about one pound of drained kraut) mix 1 cup of meat stock, ½ cup of white wine and 1 jigger of gin. Pour the liquid on top.

Cover with a tight-fitting lid and place in a slow oven (300 degrees) or on top the stove for not less than three nor more than five hours. Do not stir or disturb; if it is cooking slowly enough it will not burn. The end product should have no excess liquid

Test by tasting a thread of the top choucroute. It is not done until it absolutely melts in your mouth.

Two and one-half hours before serving, put in slab bacon cut into two inch chunks. Bury the bacon in kraut. Bed it down well and cover tightly again, continuing the same gentle simmer. Half an hour before serving, bury the knockwursts similarly.

Many purists won't eat choucroute the first day, saying it is better repeated. Caution: after five hours of cooking, the aroma of sauerkraut will be so overwhelming, it will be hard not to wolf it down on the spot. If you refrigerate it overnight and finish the cooking on the morrow, hold the knockwursts until the next day.

Serve very hot. If reheating, it should take one hour in a 325-degree oven. Serve on a large platter, arranging the choucroute in a mound and piling the meat on and around it. The meat will be like butter, so carve the meat at the table. Hot boiled potatoes go well and good mustard is essential.

Food important to Jewish New Year

The "shofar" sounds at sunset today calling Jews to a "holy convocation." This is the Jewish New Year, or Rosh Hashanah, and the ram's horn summons worshipers "to look within, to search their consciences, and then come to sincere repentance." Following the solemn services, families and friends gather for a joyous beginning to the Ten Days of Penitence which end with Yom Kippur when the book of accounts is closed and judgment reached. Traditionally, Rosh Hashanah corresponds to the close of a harvest year and food is an important part of the observance. Here is a variation of a Chicken Liver Knish, for the occasion.

CHICKEN LIVER KNISHES

- 1½ cups chopped onion
- ¾ cup peanut oil
- 1 pound chicken livers
- ¼ pound mushrooms, chopped
- 1⅛ teaspoon salt
- Generous dash pepper
- ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 1¼ cups unsifted flour
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 3 tablespoons lukewarm water
- 2 eggs, beaten separately

Brown onions in one-half cup peanut oil. Add chicken livers, mushrooms, 1 teaspoon salt and pepper. Cook mixture over medium heat about 5 minutes or until livers are no longer pink. Stir frequently. Remove from heat; stir in bread crumbs. Cool slightly. Run mixture through meat grinder using fine blade. Set aside. Mix together flour, sugar and remaining one-eighth teaspoon salt. Stir in remaining one-fourth cup peanut oil, water and 1 egg. Knead dough on lightly floured board until smooth and elastic about 5 minutes. Divide dough in half, wrap one half to prevent drying. On a lightly floured board roll remaining half into a 12x9 inch rectangle. Cut 12 three-inch squares. Top each square with about one and one-half tablespoons liver mixture. Bring 2 opposite corners together and pinch seam to seal forming a triangle. Form each triangle into a three and one-half oval with seam underneath. Place on ungreased baking sheet seam side down. Brush with remaining beaten egg. Repeat with remaining dough and filling. Bake at 350 degrees 25 to 30 minutes, or until lightly browned. Serve warm. Makes 24 appetizers.

The almond necessary in this dessert

Although we tend to think of peanuts and pecans in connection with southern cooking, the ubiquitous almond is there, too! One bit of evidence is found in award-winning cook book writer Helen Worth's latest book, "Damnyankee in a Southern Kitchen" (Westover Publishing Company).

Mrs. Worth calls Strawberry Peach a "pink of perfection" dessert from a plantation kitchen. We think you'll agree that it could be made only with almonds.

This simple, elegant dessert combines fresh peaches with frozen strawberries, an almond-tinged strawberry syrup and a snowy garnish of sliced blanched almonds. Superb!

If you're serving this lovely dessert for a party, you might, as Mrs. Worth suggests, splash each serving with champagne, then pour the rest of the bottle for guests to sip. A beautiful way to end a meal!

When fresh peaches are no longer available, substitute bananas for a variation on this splendid little recipe.

STRAWBERRY PEACH

- 1 package (1 pound) frozen strawberries in syrup
- 6 medium peaches
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- ¾ cup sliced blanched almonds

Drain berries and boil syrup until it spins a thread from tines of fork. It will take about 10 minutes and almost all the liquid will have cooked down. Meanwhile, skin peaches and slice into serving bowl. Pour syrup over immediately, and add strawberries and extract. Chill and serve garnished with almonds. Makes 6-plus servings.

Beef Hot Pot hits the spot for diners

We've been pleasantly surprised at how many innovative recipes are coming out of hiding now that consumers are looking for less tender cuts of beef for menu plans. Consumer specialists from the California Beef Council developed this repast simply called Beef Hot Pot. This style of cooking supposedly introduced to China in the 13th century adapts beautifully to our California lifestyle.

The mainstay of this colorful meal is strips of boneless beef chuck. If the menu can afford a higher priced cut, use top round or sirloin tip. The beef, vegetables and very fine pasta are cooked in easy stages in the Mongolian cook pot. It's not the kind of meal to serve when everyone dashes to the table intent on eating as quickly as possible.

This is a most enjoyable meal to share with friends for a relaxing evening. It's a breeze for the hostess to prepare. Each diner gets into the act in much the same way you would if it were beef fondue. In fact, an electric skillet or a fondue pot which can maintain a boiling temperature would be good alternate choices for the cooking vessel. The cooking liquid in this case is simmering beef broth—a great advantage for those who are watching calories.

Center the dining table with the charcoal heated hot pot and place an attractive arrangement of beef, vegetables and dipping sauce before each person. The accepted procedure is to dip the beef strips and vegetables into the simmering broth with chop sticks or fondue forks and cook as desired. Then dip the morsels into the special sauce before eating. After the food on the individual plates is eaten comes the soup ceremony. Additional vegetables and the pasta plus the remaining special sauce cook quickly in the hot broth. The delicious light soup ends the main course of the meal. All in all a very pleasant way to entertain.

BEEF HOT POT

- 2 pounds lean boneless beef chuck
- 1-3rd cup each soy sauce, dry sherry and cider vinegar
- 1 egg, beaten
- ¼ cup each chopped parsley, celery leaves and green onions
- Spinach
- 2-3rds pound small mushrooms, halved
- ½ basket cherry tomatoes
- ½ head Romaine letuce, broken into pieces
- 1 cup coil capellini or other very fine pasta
- 2 (10½-ounce) cans beef broth, diluted

Slice beef across grain into thin 1x4-inch strips. Coil beef into rosettes in 4 small bowls. Mix soy sauce, wine, vinegar, beaten egg, parsley, celery leaves and green onions. Portion 2 tablespoons into each of 4 small dishes. Reserve remaining sauce in serving bowl. Line 4 dinner plates or trays with spinach leaves. Make attractive arrangements of beef, sauce, mushrooms and tomatoes on them. Arrange Romaine, additional spinach leaves and pasta on one serving plate.

Dilute beef broth with 2 soup cans water in hot pot or fondue pot. Heat to boiling and place in center of dining table. Each diner cooks his own meal. One piece at a time, spear beef and vegetables with fondue fork or hold with chop sticks and cook in simmering broth until done as desired. Dip into special sauce before eating. After individual servings are eaten, add reserved sauce, Romaine, spinach and pasta to hot broth. Let come to boil and cook about 3 minutes or until pasta is tender. Ladle soup into bowls which originally held the beef. The soup ceremony completes the main course of the meal. Makes 4 servings. NOTE: Individual servings of steamed rice are often served in separate bowls and eaten at the same time as the beef and vegetables.

The Italians put it all together

An Italian boiled dinner (bollito misto) combines tongue, beef, chicken and vegetables. Often the pot also contains calf's head and calf's brains as traditional ingredients and always there is a Green Sauce. Here is a variation of Italian Bollito using a less expensive chuck roast to help stretch the meat dollar.

ITALIAN BOLLITO

- 12 pound chuck roast
- 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate (optional)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons salad
- ½ cup chopped scallions
- 2 ribs of celery with tops, cut in chunks
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ¼ cup drained capers
- ½ cup chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon chopped anchovy
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup dry white wine
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 bay leaf
- ¼ teaspoon dried leaf tarragon

Sprinkle chuck roast on both sides with monosodium glutamate, salt and pepper. Heat oil in Dutch oven; add roast and brown on both sides. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and simmer 2½ hours, or until meat is tender. Serve with Green Sauce. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

GREEN SAUCE

- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups liquid from chuck roast (unstrained)
- 2 egg yolks
- ¼ cup chopped parsley

In medium saucepan melt butter. Blend in flour, then gradually stir in liquid. Stir constanly, over low heat, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Stir a little sauce into the egg yolks in small bowl, return yolk mixture to sauce, and add parsley. Heat, but do not boil.

Soup firm offers meatless menus

CAMDEN, N. J. — Campbell Soup Co. has developed a series of primarily meatless lunch menus to help the nation's schools adapt their student lunch programs to the current and projected shortage of meat products and other commodity items. Based on Campbell's popular "Soup 'n Sandwich" theme, all the menus meet U.S. Department of Agriculture Type A Lunch requirements to qualify for commodity grants and — or cash reimbursements.

In announcing the availability of the new menus, John Carbonell, President Food Service Products Division, said Campbell is prepared to continue the service throughout the school year. " 'Soup 'n Sandwich' meals have always been accepted as attractive, nutritious meals which schools can provide at an affordable price," Carbonell said. "With the outlook for commodity foods, costs and sources of revenue as bleak as it is, our new menus present school lunch directors with additonal ways of adjusting to the current situation."

There are 11 menus in the series, Carbonell said. Most draw extensively on recipes contained in USDA card files already maintained by most school lunch directors. The menus are being distributed as a service directly to schools and through the USDA.

Carbonell said the soup and sandwich combination "provides a framework for menus which students readily accept. For the schools, the menus represent good value meals which are comparatively easy to prepare. The important point today is, the ingredients required to make them are readily available."

Jean Nidetch, Weight Watchers® Founder, Helps People Who Gave Up Ice Cream Celebrate With New Frozen Dairy Dessert.

Weight Watchers members welcome Jean Nidetch with open arms.

Jean brings that nice and creamy frozen dessert to the celebration.

An air of jubilant festivity greeted Jean Nidetch, Founder of Weight Watchers Organization, as she held a press conference to announce a much welcomed addition to Weight Watchers menu. Weight Watchers members and non-members alike demonstrated enthusiasm for the new frozen dairy dessert.

They cheered Mrs. Nidetch when she stood at the speakers table surrounded by local dignitaries. "We think you've gone without it long enough," said Mrs. Nidetch, "having to give up ice cream was no fun. I know how much I missed it, but now that Weight Watchers introduced this frozen dairy dessert no one will miss ice cream anymore. Weight Watchers developed this frozen dairy dessert just for all you people who gave up ice cream."

Jean Nidetch, who has been shepherding the waistlines of nearly 4 million people within the past 10 years, knows what it takes to turn herself from a 214 lb. "fatty" to a curvaceous, stunning blonde. Fantastic weight losses are ordinary happenings in the successful Weight Watchers Program. Weight Watchers is an organization that reaches out to 50 states and several foreign countries.

People with a minimum of 10 lbs. to lose can embark on the Weight Watchers Program for a nominal fee where, at weekly classes in an atmosphere of warmth and understanding, they discuss their progress in losing weight.

Two "superlosers" celebrate; Mrs. Eleanor Williams lost 91 pounds and Mrs. Jean LeCastre lost 95 pounds.

"Smooth velvety, absolutely luscious" is the way Jean described the new frozen dairy dessert.

Ice Cream! You Won't Miss It Anymore!

Jean Nidetch enjoys her favorite new dessert with local dignitaries. Everyone agrees that this frozen dairy dessert is the greatest.

With arms extended, vivacious Jean Nidetch continued her talk about Weight Watchers frozen dairy dessert. "No more midnight trips to the refrigerator, sneaking a taste of forbidden ice cream. Weight Watchers frozen dairy dessert will more than satisfy the urge for ice cream," said Weight Watchers attractive Founder.

"Weight Watchers new frozen dessert has less than 1% fat. Can you imagine that. And it's naturally sweetened so you get a real ice cream taste," she told that excited audience, who all felt they had gone without it for too long. "You'll love its vanilla flavor. Frozen dairy dessert is Weight Watchers celebration for people like you who gave up ice cream."

As hostesses moved through the crowd offering servings of Weight Watchers new frozen dessert, Jean added a few more welcome words.

"Go home, get out that old familiar dish, and have a serving of frozen dairy dessert and celebrate."

Serve them yogurt for cultured diet

It's anyone's guess why yogurt, a cultured milk product, would become so popular that it now boasts its very own refrigerated case in many supermarkets. It is estimated that over half a billion servings were consumed last year.

A couple of years ago a dairy industry survey revealed that almost one-fourth of the population was eating yogurt and of these more than a third had not been eating yogurt the previous year. Yokgurt is most popular in the western states. The favorite flavor is strawberry. And as might be expected most yogurt eaters live in large cities. The stock answer given by consumers as to why they eat yogurt was simply because it tastes so good.

Yogurt is a very versatile food and is often eaten for a light meal or snack. It is low fat. An 8-ounce serving of plain yogurt has about 130 calores and the fruit-flavored ones have about twice the number.

Both the plain and fruit-flavored yogurts can be used as an ingredient in all sorts of foods. The two recipes given here were developed by the home economics department of the California Milk Advisory Board. The stroganoff is one of the best we've tasted in a long time and its special bonus is the fact that it is made with less expensive beef stew. Plain yogurt is stirred into the sauce at the very end, the same procedure you use in adding sour cream to this classic dish.

The super delicious, very colorful gelatin dessert is made with raspberry yogurt. This party dessert has a butter cooky crust. The sides are frosted with whipped cream after the sides of the springform pan are removed.

YOGURT STROGANOFF

1½ pounds lean beef stew
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 (2-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces
1½ cups sliced onions
1 cup water
3 tablespoons catsup
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅓ teaspoon garlic powder
½ pint plain yogurt

Cut beef into 1-inch cubes. Roll beef in flour mixed with salt and pepper. Brown beef in butter a few pieces at a time over medium high heat. Return all beef to skillet, add liquid drained from mushrooms, onions, water, catsup, Worcestershire sauce and garlic powder. Do not stir but cover and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, stirring occasionally about 1 hour, or until tender and sauce is thickened. Just before serving, stir yogurt until smooth and add along with mushrooms to beef. Heat 1 or 2 minutes. Serve over buttered poppy seed noodles or rice. Makes 4 servings. Buttermilk may be used in place of yogurt.

YOGURT DESSERT

1 (6 ounce) package raspberry gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
1 quart raspberry yogurt
1 pint whipping cream
Butter Cooky Crust
Raspberries for garnish

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Combine with 3 cups yogurt. Chill until it begins to thicken. Meanywhile, whip cream until stiff. Fold 3 cups whipped cream into partially thickened raspberry mixture. Pour into springform pan over Butter Cooky Crust. Chill until firm, at least 3 hours. Remove pan sides. Spread top of dessert with remaining 1 cup yogurt and sides with remaining 1 cup whipped cream. Decoarate top with raspberries if desired. Makes 12 servings.

BUTTER COOKY CRUST: Mix 1 cup flour, 2 tablespoons sugar and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cut in 1-3rd cup firm butter with electric mixer or pastry blender until consistency of coarse meal. Mix in 1 egg yolk. Lightly pat crumbly mixture into bottom of 8-inch springform pan. Bake in 400 degree oven 12 minutes or until light golden at edge. Cool.

Crab combos serve up summer taste pleasure

Summer, sand, surfing, swimming—they go together as naturally as cream cheese, crab meat and beer.

Summertime involves a variety of outdoor activities with swimming heading the list, and nothing seems to work up the appetite more than a few laps around the pool. The swimmers, be they male or female, child or adult, will surely be looking for some zesty eating.

The answer, Creamy Crab Combos, short on preparation time, but long on appeal, is a delicious change. A creamy mixture of crab meat and cream cheese is subtly blended with beer, scooped onto English muffins, topped with cheese and tomato, then baked until the cheddar cheese has melted. Better plan on making quite a few extra of these as they go mighty fast.

Beer, with a natural affinity for seafood, is a natural in this recipe as well as in the glass. Nothing quenches your thirst on a hot summer day as well as an ice cold sparkling beer, so have plenty on hand for the adults!

CREAMY CRAB COMBOS

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese
1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
½ cup beer
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 cans (6½ ounces each) crab meat
6 whole English muffins
12 slices cheddar cheese
12 slices tomato

Soften cream cheese with beer. Mix in onion, Worcestershire sauce and crab meat. Split English muffins in half. (You may toast both sides of muffin under broiler first if you prefer.) Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place 2 heaping tablespoons of crab meat mixture on each muffin. Cover with slice of tomato and then slice of cheese. Bake in oven for approximately 10 to 15 minutes. Serves 6.

Airline to partially darken neon signs

LOSANGELES (UPI) —The big neon signs reading "estern Airlines" will henceforth be dark from midnight to 6 a.m. in the 14 western states where the airline operates.

Arthur F. Kelly, president of the airline, said Monday that he had ordered the identification signs shut off to help with the power shortage. The move will conserve about 400,000 kilowatts of electricity a year, he said.

Brew fertilizer

CARLTON, England (UPI) —Little Simon Barwell's sunflower just wouldn't grow, no matter how often he watered it.

Simon, 5, who planted the seed himself, finally poured some of his father's homebrewed beer on the plant. It is now 12 feet high.

California has 96 community colleges with a projected fall enrollment of more than 930,000 full and part time students.

Psychologist insists fairytales aid child

One of the world's most distinguished child psychologists today disagreed with experts who believe that "old-fashioned fairytales are bad for children" and chastised parents who either "censor fairytales for their children's consumption, or flatly refuse to let their children read or hear them."

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, in the October issue of Ladies-Home Journal, asserted, "Without fairytales and their encouraging messages, life can often seem unbearable to the young child." He said that opponents "of fairytales say that such stories are frightening and demoralizing, and that they encourage children to be unrealistic about finding solutions to life's problems.

"I do not agree," stated Dr. Bettelheim, "fairytales do hold out the promise of an unequivocally happy life, but by doing so they give children the most vital of commodities — hope. Without hope for a good future, life may seem unbearably difficult; the fantasies of a fairytale can enrich a child's existence and sustain her until the age of reason," he said. "She learns soon enough that one cannot master life's vagaries by magic manipulation."

Dr. Bettelheim, who recently retired after 28 years as Professor of Psychology and Psychiatry at the University of Chicago and Director of the Sonia Shankman Orthogenic School for chronically disturbed children, stated that fairytales "forego direct appeals to the conscience, and address themselves to man's unconscious needs, desires, hopes, fears." The psychologist said that because they avoid "moralizing, they can direct the child's development without coercing her into agreement."

Dr. Bettelheim said that on "the surface these stories may seem reinforcements of irrationality; but on a deeper level they reveal truths to the child that she would be hard-pressed to find in other contexts. The fairytale permits the child to perceive such truths without her conscious awareness; by speaking directly to the child as a not-yet-rational being, they transmit what would otherwise be lost on her." Dr. Bettelheim stated in his Journal article that "fairytales work because they depict the child's problems the way a child sees them."

Ask Dr. Brothers

They can be happy

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I read a great deal about the number of divorces and the number of extramarital affairs many people think they need to have to be happy. My husband and I have discussed this over the years, and once in a while we even wonder if we've missed something by not playing around.

Next month we'll be celebrating our 45th wedding anniversary. Our marriage has undergone many changes through the years, but we feel that most of these changes have been rewarding and we've grown. I wish young people today would realize that if they want to, if they work at it, they can make a marriage last, and it can get to be even more fulfilling in the later years. Since there's so much written about the problems in marriage, I thought you might like to hear something about the joys of one marriage that has lasted. — L.Q.

Dear L.Q.: Thank you. I'm sure one reason your marriage has lasted is your allowing it to change and you not being rigid in what you expected and demanded of yourselves and of each other.

Respect is a basic factor in any good relationship. You and your husband obviously respect each other as individuals. Respect comes from recognizing another person as a human being with needs and desires that must be gratified., just as one's own needs be met and gratified. In a relationship such as yours, neither partner is superior or inferior, but together the two form a working relationship.

Dr. Peter Laderman believes that marriages often can be more romantic and interesting in the tenth, the twentieth, thirtieth, and the fortieth years than in the first few years. If one expects the romance too soon, or looks for it in ways that can't be delivered, then there will be disappointment and romance will not exist at all.

Some marriages fail because the couple's expectations are out of reach. No marriage can be perfect at the start any more than babies can know everything when they are born. Marriages do change and grow and this is one of the most exciting things about the institution.

More than 400 Oklahoma husbands and wives, ranging in age from 60 to 89, were questioned, not too long ago, by three family-relations specialists about the past and present of their marriages. Nearly 95 per cent rated their marriages as happy or very happy, and a majority called the present the happiest period of their marriages and of their lives.

The researchers, Nick Stinnett and Linda Mittelstet Carter of Oklahoma State University, and James Montgomery of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, say the older person may increasingly depend upon his mate to fulfill his basic emotional needs, because of his gradually decreasing interaction with other people, institutions and his children. They found that as people grow older together in marriage they start to think alike. The two most rewarding aspects of marriage for these couples were companionship and being able to express true feelings to each other. The most troublesome aspects were different values and philosophies of life, and lack of mutual interests.

Some men and women change even roles in their later years, when their children are grown. often the change is welcomed by both the man and the woman. The wife often becomes more aggressive at a time when the man is tired of having to make all the decisions. She may become the dominant partner, reclaiming her independence, while her husband becomes more submissive. Any change is good as long as it serves the interests of both spouses.

You and your husband have probably missed nothing by your pattern of fidelity. You have obviously gained a happy, fulfilling, growing relationship.

University Women schedule annual tea

The annual membership tea of Pomona Valley Branch, American Association of University Women, has been set Saturday from 10:30 a.m. to noon in the home of Mrs. T. W. Oglesby, 4114 Oak Hollow Road, Claremont.

The membership committee will be in charge of refreshments. Additional information may be obtained by calling Mrs. John Mason, 982-9618, or Mrs. David J. Orr, president, 627-1997.

A woman holding a baccalaureate or higher degree from a qualified institution or from a foreign institution recognized by the International Federation of University Women is eligible for membership.

Purpose of the organization is to unite the alumnae of colleges and universities for practical educational work, to concentrate and increase their influence in the community for the solution of social and civic problems and to participate in the development and promotion of the policies and programs of the AAUW.

The first meeting of the year will be held Oct. 9 at Great Western Savings and Loan Building at 7:30 p.m.

Jean Harper, a member of the editorial staff of the ABC Television network, will be the speaker.

During the first six months of 1973, 28,800 California drivers had their licenses revoked or suspended for drunk driving, according to the National Auto Club.

HIGH LEVEL TALKS — Two workmen exchange talk way, way up on TV tower cross beam in St. Louis, Mo.

No one in hurry to leave unsafe Capitol

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Little by little, the historic golden-domed west wing of the Capitol is being vacated in preparation for locking the doors to everyone except senators and assemblymen.

Only a few tenants have moved out of the 104-year-old structure despite a Sept. 15 deadline for emptying the Capitol. Now the target date is Dec. 1.

The legislature's Joint Rules Committee ordered evacuation after two studies concluded that the building could not withstand even a moderate earthquake.

When the move is completed officials will lock the west wing's heavy wood and glass doors, leaving the building empty for at least five years— except for the two legislative chambers.

The lawmakers decided they will continue to meet in the chambers in spite of the earthquake peril. But everyone else in the historic building must go.

Many state officials—including Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., Legislative Counsel George Murphy and Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post—are moving to the new Park Executive building across from the Capitol.

The legislature alone will be renting more than 100,000 square feet of office space in privately-owned Sacramento buildings at monthly rent of more than $53,000.

Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, a declared candidate for the 1974 GOP gubernatorial nomination, will move into space in the newer east wing of the Capitol being vacated by Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff.

Because the public may not be permitted to enter the legislative chambers, staff aides are working on a plan to provide closed-circuit television of the two chambers which could be viewed in nearby committee rooms. But they are not certain the plan would be legal under the state's open meetings law.

Newsmen covering the chambers in person may be asked to sign waivers freeing the state from liability in the event of an injury-causing earthquake.

Meantime, the legislature is pondering whether it should construct a new legislative office building or reconstruct and expand the current Capitol to make room for an ever-expanding staff.

Two independent studies of the problem are being made currently.

Regardless, the historic halls of California's seat of government will be removed from the swirl of government for the first time in 104 years when the doors are locked later this year.

Hunt paints pathetic picture of career

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "I was an intelligence officer," E. Howard Hunt told senators with what seemed a trace of pride. "A spy for the government of the United States."

But it was colder spying in politics than it ever had been in international affairs, Hunt's testimony showed. He gave an account Monday of personal downfall involving the death of his wife, prison for perhaps life, a stroke and enormous debts.

"I cannot escape feeling that the country I have served for my entire life and which directed me to carry out the Watergate entry is punishing me for doing the very things it trained and directed me to do," he said.

Hunt's background includes North Atlantic destroyer duty and Air Force intelligence just before and during U.S. participation in World War II; a wartime stint in China with CIA's forerunner, the Office of Strategic Services, and 21 years in CIA until his retirement in 1970.

"I was trained in the techniques of physical and electronic surveillance, photography, document forgery and surreptitious entries into guarded premises for photography and installation of electronic devices," he said.

His CIA work took him to Europe and South America. As "Eduardo," he was a supervisor in the unsuccessful Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba in 1961.

In his former world, he said, a spy was disavowed when caught, but the agency paid legal and family expenses. After Watergate he said money came in, but huge legal fees ate it up, $156,000 to one lawyer, and these funds "have long since been exhausted."

His wife, Dorothy died in a plane crash Dec. 8, and her insurance went to lawyers. He said he has been in solitary confinement, physically attacked, and robbed in federal prison in Danbury, Conn., where he also suffered a stroke and where, at age 55, he thinks he may be for "the rest of my life."

Barstow, Santa Fe ordered to clean up river

BARSTOW (UPI) — The city of Barstow and the Santa Fe railroad have been ordered to clean up the polluted Mojave River, which has become "degraded" by high concentrations of deterents, oil and chemical salts.

The order was contained in a Regional Water Quality Control Board statement issued recently, charging the city and the railroad with polluting the river over a 60-year period. The report said the "degraded" water was still drinkable but has a distinct "taste and odor."

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Osmosis.

NEEDED: Two slices of fresh apple or turnip or carrot, some salt.

DO THIS: Place the slices on a plate, and sprinkle a little salt on one. In a few minutes it will be covered with water and will be limp. The other, without the salt, will remain stiff and may show signs of drying.

HERE'S WHY: Osmosis here is the flowing of water through the membranes of the cells of the vegetable on which the salt has been sprinkled. The flow is mostly in the direction of the denser liquid. Here, the salt dissolving in the moisture of the vegetable increases its density and the osmotic flow starts.

A HOUSEHOLD HINT: In most cases vegetables should be cooked before they are salted. They are more tender (beans, for example) and need less cooking time.

Jet crash scars beginning to heal

By ROBERT E. SWEET

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —"I still duck every time a plane flies over," remarked Kit Dickson, an attractive employe of a swank Sacramento clothing store.

When wind whistles through the modern shop, another employe shudders and gets the eerie feeling "there might be ghosts." Their fears are not surprising.

The Peddlers fashion store was built on the ruins of an old-fashioned ice cream parlor known as "the happy place" which became a deathly inferno one year ago.

On a summery Sunday afternoon, partying children were eating sumptuous sundaes when a Korean War era F86 Sabrejet barrelled into the Farrell's Ice Cream Parlour in an aborted takeoff following an air show.

Twenty-two people, including a dozen children, were killed and another 28 injured in the Sept. 24 1972, tragedy, the worst of its type in U.S history.

The fiery crash killed nine members of three interrelated families, including an entire family of four. It also left deep emotional scars in those who survived the horrible calamity.

"With this amount of time past, I prefer to have it wiped out of my madnam i at of my mind as much as possible," said Ruben Bacci, of Stockton. His wife, Joan, and daughter, Kristin, were killed n the tragedy. Three of his sons were also injured.

The National Transportation Safety Board said the "probable cause" of the accident was "inadequate pilot proficiency in the aircraft." It also issued many recommendations to prevent similar future crashes, some of which have been carried out.

The pilot, Richard Bingham of Novato, Calif., survived the mishap with only minor injuries. He now is sales manager at Bay Aviation Services Inc. in Oakland and still has a pilot's license, according to the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

The board said Bingham took off at too steep an angle, forcing the jet to stall.

The blue and gold Canadian-built jet was part of a collection of old military jets owned by multimillionaire William Penn Patrick, a flamboyant cosmetics tycoon.

Patrick was killed this past summer when another of his old fighters, a P51, slammed into the ground.

More than $16 million in damages have been sought by survivors of the ice cream parlor tragedy but final settlements have been delayed by legal maneuvering.

The runway at the Sacramento Executive Airport which the Sabrejet used was aimed directly at the parlor and ended only 500 feet from a shopping center and homes.

Even though airplanes—including Gov. Ronald Reagan's state jet—still use the ill-fated runway, the charred hull of the ice cream store has been rebuilt to house the clothing shop.

"We're getting a lot of people shopping here now who were afraid to come in or who had relatives or neighbors die in the accident," Miss Dickson, 25, said in an interview. "It's taken them a year, but you know how time heals."

The safety board recommended that there should be regulations prohibiting shopping centers, housing developments and other congested areas from being located adjacent to airports. But little has been done to carry out the suggestion.

"There are situations like this all over the country," said Patrick Melarkey, chairman of the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors. "But what can you do except buy back all the homes in the area, which would be economically unrealistic."

The biggest change in FAA regulations because of the tragedy was an increase in the minimum pilot training needed before a person may fly a high-powered surplus military jet.

Bingham had only 7.5 hours flying time in the Sabrejet before he flew it from Oakland to the air show. He had 2,500 hours of total flying time.

Now pilots must go through a formal military-type training program involving up to 50 hours flying time before they can fly solo in surplus military jets.

The FAA also now forbids such old military craft from flying over "congested areas" such as the shopping center adjacent to the Sacramento Executive Airport.

However, if a pilot should ignore the FAA warning and ask the airport tower to land an F86, local regulations would not prevent the landing, according to County Airport Manager James Carr.

Federal inspectors made several other suggestions to improve the airport's safety, but most have not been followed.

For example, they said lights should be installed to warn pilots they are nearing the end of the runway; a cushion could be constructed at the end of the runway to prevent planes from careening across the nearby highway and crashing into the shopping center, as the F86 did; and all high-powered aircraft could be banned from the runway aimed at the center. None of this has been done.

Worst fight the last for mom of 4; husband slain

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The two patrolmen thought it odd when they saw a mother with a child in her arms and three other little girls tagging behind in the early morning hours.

Officers Gary Eisenbroich and Dave Roccaforte asked the woman whether there was any trouble.

"I just had another fight with my husband," she said. "The worst we ever had ... I think I killed him."

The policemen then went to her home and found her husband mortally wounded.

Mrs. Alice Fuller, 26, was taken to city prison where she was booked for investigation of homicide for the death of her husband, David, 27, a chauffeur.

The children were taken to a dependents cottage at Youth Guidance Center.

Police said Mrs. Fuller had knife wounds on the arm and back. They said they found two steak knives near her husband's body.

Institute of Future issues sweeping forecast of future

By ROBERT STRAND

MENLO PARK (UPI) —While saying prediction gets tougher day by day, the Institute for the Future has issued a sweeping forecast about the details of life a decade hence.

Our society is so far out of control that no leader — including the President —can any longer make predictions with confidence, the Institute says.

But, doing the best it can, the institute has issued a volume, called Project Aware, givingthe mathematical prospects on everything from hair transplants (good) to happiness (not so good).

The picture presents more and more people sleeping in the nude. With a general erotic awakening, large numbers of men will use body lotions in preparation for lovemaking.

The chance of making new tires out of old is nil. The chance of aspirin being replaced as a treatment for arthritis is near zero.

Knitwear will steadily increase. But by 1984 up to 30 per cent of clothing will be throwaway.

At home clothing will be heavier as thermostats keep temperatures low because of the high cost of energy. People probably will be charged extra for electricity and gas during peak periods, such as winter cold spells.

The stock market will be totally revamped. Tax-free municipal bonds will be phased out in favor of federal subsidizing of locally issued securities.

Cable television, microwave and video cassettes will have daily impacts on your local school. Cars will be smaller, and subject for ecological reasons to special "junking" taxes.

Sex discrimination will decline, hospital costs will double and violent crime per the decline will last until 1985.

In the cities and suburbs, the quality of life will continue to decline. In the suburbs the dscline will last until 1985, but the cities may begin to recover in 1980.

Permanent feature

"Government incompetence, corruption and disregard for the law are judged to be largely permanent features of the political system," Project Aware says. "Importance, however, is assigned to the government' guises of secrecy."

The citizen's "sense of powerlessness" to affect his society is spreading rapidly, and "the situation is expected to grow worse during the 15 years." more and more workers will become unhappy with their jobs, their employers and their unions. some answers for management suggested were profit sharing, work enrichment and giving employes increased control over their own working environment. all in all, the picture promises a somewhat better material life but no improvement in the general population's psychic well-being. their rather disappointing prognosis of project aware resulted from studies commissioned a year ago by DuPont Scott Paper, Monsanto and Lever Bros. the institute for the future, a non-profit organization five years old, employs a forecasting method different from most similar enterprises.

Some futurologists utilize costly computer models whose results are no better than the data combinations fed the computer. Others plot data from the past and extrapolate a trend.

"But for long-term forecasts extrapolation just doesn't play anymore," says Roy Amara, institute president. "It doesn't play because we have hit too many environmental and other limits, and because it excludes interaction effects."

"In the past, it seemed possible to make forecasts without looking too far afield from the domain for which they were made. But now everything depends upon everything else."

Amara's instutute uses a method called Delphic in which questionaires are sent to appropriate members of a 100-person panel of experts, including Nobel laureates and academic and business specialists. Results often are expressed in mathematical probabilities.

For Project Aware, the instiute got leads on areas of inquiry by asking corporate officers of the sponsoring companies:

"You have an opportunity to ask a clairvoyant whose information is infallible on anything about the future that will help you conduct your business. But you have only five minutes. What would you ask?"

A difficulty with the method, Amara says, is that experts are not so sure of themselves anymore. What happens in an expert's own field depends too much on what happens in adjoining fields in which he is not expert.

"The level of understanding of people who make decisions in government and business is very primitive," Amara says.

"Unfortunately all of us want to assume people in power have greater knowledge than they do."

"We have overcomplicated society to the point where nobody knows how it runs," says Andrew J. Lipinsky, senior research fellow. "The captain is on the bridge, but he can't find the rudder."

"Society has become a freight train moving with its own inertia. Our leaders stand alongside shouting, and they don't even try putting sticks in the wheels."

Lipinsky says the time may have come when a President might be wise to tell the nation honestly about certain problems:

"' I don't know what to do. I have to make some decision, and it will be so and so. The results won't be visible for two or three years, and it will be my successor who finds out if it works."

Lipinsky thinks the voter, relieved that the decision isn't his, just might say, "Bless you."

Hayes to head county effort on tax initiative

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — County Supervisor James Hayes said Monday he is heading up a county effort to urge voters to support Gov. Reagan's controversial tax limitation initiative.

"Proposition I will deal with the problem of ever-spiraling taxes brought about by politicians with a penchant for gouging the people's pocketbooks," Hayes told a news conference.

Hayes will serve as county chairman for a group advocating passage of the measure on the Nov. 6 ballot.

NIH chief wants more heart research money

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Dr. Robert S. Stone, new director of the National Institute of Health (NIH), is a man who apparently believes in fighting city hall.

Appointed only two and one-half months ago by an administration which in the past has refused to fund some NIH programs, Stone served notice in a UPI interview that he will ask for a bigger budget next year, particularly in research on heart disease.

"There is a reservoir of (unfunded) research that it would be desirable to fund," Stone said. "I don't know of any instance where NIH is wasting money."

Stone, formerly vice president and medical dean at the University of New Mexico, replaced Dr. Robert Q. Marston, who was fired by the administration earlier this year. In the interview, Stone also said:

—NIH is nearing completion of new guidelines to protect human subjects of medical research, especially mental patients, children and prisoners. "Rising social sensitivities require that we treat that group of individuals in a special way," he said.

—Despite the administration's claim that NIH was not well managed under Marston, Stone contends "it was well-managed before I came here."

He said he was "not privy to" information about whether the administration will continue last year's policy of withholding appropriated NIH funds that it does not want to spend.

Stone said cancer and heart research, which have increased under Nixon at the expense of research in other areas such as child health and infectious diseases, still can use more money effectively.

Congress appropriated $2.1 The President asked for $2 billion in 1973 and later amended it to $1.9 billion. billion for NIH in fiscal 1972.

'Worthless'

Publisher hits Nixon conferences

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — After studying President Nixon's Aug. 22 news conference, Nashville Tennessean publisher John Seigenthaler has concluded that presidential news conferences must change or become worthless.

In an article published Sunday, Seigenthaler said the conferences have one claring weakness: "The inability of newsmen to probe the President in depth with 'follow-up questions' once he has made an initial response to another reporter's inquiry."

Among the examples the publisher used to illustrate his point was a question asked the president by UPI reporter Helen Thomas. The question was: "On July 6, 1972, you were warned by Patrick Gray that you were being mortally wounded by some of your top aides. Can you explain why you didn't ask who they were, and what was going on?"

Seigenthaler said Nixon began by saying: "Well, in the telephone conversation you refer to what has been, of course, quite widely reported in the press as well as on television. Mr. Gray said that he was concerned that as far as the investigation he had responsibility for, that some of my top aides were not cooperating. Whether the term used was 'mortally wounded' I do not know. Some believe that it was. Some believe that it wasn't. That is irrelevent. He could have said that."

"At this point," the publisher wrote, "the President's answer changed directions. He talked on for a couple of minutes about why he told Gray to check with CIA Deputy Director Gen. Vernon A. Walters to make sure that the FBI probe didn't interfere with CIA activities. He never came back to the original question asked him by Helen Thomas: 'Why did he not ask Gray which aides were trying to wound him?'"

In preparing the article, Seigenthaler interviewed Miss Thomas, Dan Rather of CBS news, Peter Lisagor of the Chicago Daily News and Clark Mollenhoff, chief of the Washington bureau of the Cowles publications.

He said all of the correspondents interviewed agreed "if press conferences were held every week or two that followup questions could be developed at subsequent conferences."

Seigenthaler said the weakness of the presidential news conference has caused some observers to demand reforms and a few others to call for ending them on the theory that nothing new or important ever comes out of them.

"Unless newsmen find ways to reform the press conference," Seigenthaler said, "the institution will undoubtedly continue its decline and ultimately become worthless."

Soldiers' reaction to woman colonel mixed

WUERZBURG, Germany (UPI) —Hey, sarge, the colonel is a lady. How d'ya like that?

"I think that's just great," S. Sgt. James Adams of Harlan, Ky, says. "I'm all for equal rights and it's time women get command of a post they are capable of commanding."

That's one reaction. Then, there's another:

"I'd be willing to make a statement about one month after she's been here," Sgt. John A. Colcleausure of Commanche, Tex., says.

It's more than the eyes of Texas that will be sizing up Lt. Col. Nancy Hopfenspirger, 47, of Delmar, N.Y., when she takes command of the Wuerzburg U.S. Army Support District in a week.

Adams, an auto mechanic, and Colcleausure, an administrative specialist, are just two of the many men the colonel will lead in her Bavarian command.

The others include butchers, bakers, "happy-hour" cocktail makers, gruff motor pool sergeants and businesslike German staff assistants.

Col. Hopfenspirger's men run commissaries, post exchanges, servicemen's clubs and special services, rereation activities, schools, motor pools and housing offices for a major portion of the U.S. army troops in northern Bavaria.

"It's a pretty big job for anybody," said Col. Harry A. Heath, assistant chief of public affairs at the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg. "She's going to be one busy woman."

relatively few enlisted men

Accompanying Washington reports of Col. Hopfenspirger's appointment, she will become the first woman to hold such a major Army command overseas. But she won't be the first female commander of men within the Army in West Germany.

Capt. Reba C. Taylor won that distinction when she assumed command of the 48th Postal Detachment in Mannheim, a much smaller command, earlier this year.

Army spokesmen declined to give precise details on the number of men under Col. Hopfenspirger's command. They said, however, she would lead officers, sergeants and German civilians, but below the noncommissioned officer rank.

She will be based at Leighton Barracks in Wuerzburg with command of support facilities also in Wertheim and Kitzingen, spokesmen said. She is scheduled to arrive today and take command Thursday.

Amphetamines intended as asthma aid

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Amphetamines were developed for relief of acute asthmatic attack and were never meant to be abused as they are today, according to Dr. Chauncey D. Leake, former head of the University of California's pharmacology laboratory.

Leake said the discovery of amphetamines by chemist Gordon Alles in 1932 was of great value to medicine although the "speed freaks" of the 1960s brought massive abuse and black marketing of the drug.

Alles, who died in 1963, "never intended the drug to be injected," said Leake. "He was fully aware of its powerful stimulating effect on the central nervous system to the point of hallucination and psychosis if the dosage was too large. He never dreamed the drug would be abused."

Early experiments with amphetamines was done with laboratory animals and "on ourselves," said Leake, who is now a senior lecturer in history of the health sciences and pharmacology.

He said the amphetamines brought asthma relief and were found "to prolong wakefulness, to increase alertness and generally to stimulate the central nervous system."

During World War II, Leake said, he recommended the use of the drug by aviators, but no official sanction was granted. However, he said, amphetamines were widely used by Japanese, German Panzer troops and by the English. Americans bootlegged the pills from British troops, he said, adding that at war's end, large amounts of the drug were dumped on the open market.

First indications that the drug was subject to abuse came during tests done on young Japanese men who took pills and "moonlighted" to earn money, said Leake. Many of them suffered from psychoses.

In the 1960s, the hippie element took the drug in extremes, often injecting massive doses into their veins, he said. Such abuse was deplorable, said Leake, but he believes recent curtailment by the Federal Drug Administration of the legally prescribed use of amphetamines was unjustified.

San Francisco and New York City were joined by telephone in 1915.

Still many holes in road for U.S., India detente

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Events surrounding the recent visit of Pakistan Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto suggest the administration's efforts to attain a balanced foreign policy towards India will be difficult to achieve.

It is not so much that new policies are too difficult to devise and put into practice. Rather that old ones are so easy to remember.

Ironically, it is not the visit of Bhutto —who heads the government India has regarded as its major enemy —but the recent coup in Chile and the dispute between the U.S. and Cuba that is at the core of the latest flap between Washington and New Delhi.

For some time before the visit of Bhutto, both Indian and U.S. officials went to great trouble to publicize a mutual desire to forget past troubles, real and imagined.

In a burst of rhetoric bordering on mutual admiration, at least by troubled Indo-American standards, officials in Washington and New Delhi used every conceivable public and private opportunity to assure each other that times had changed, mutual suspicions should be brushed aside, and a new era of real friendship was on the horizon.

Never mind that U.S. policy had tilted toward Pakistan in the Indo-Pakistan war of 1971, Indian officials said. Forget the fact the U.S. supplied Pakistan with weapons that had been turned against India instead of the communist aggressors for whom they were intended. Pakistan lost, East Pakistan emerged as Bangladesh, and things would be better.

Never mind that India used every possible chance to denounce the U.S. policy in Asia in the most vitriolic terms, U.S. officials said. Forget the fact India has accepted an enormous amount of American foreign aid but still sided more with the Soviet Union And in a sharp reversal of past practice, officials made it clear the U.S. no longer would automatically support Pakistan in its problems with its giant neighbor, India.

Butz hammers away against price controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz is on the offensive again these days against proponents of price and export controls. Butz is telling audiences wherever he can find them that controls could lead to shortages of everything from food to gasoline.

One serious problem, Butz says, could grow out of current price controls on fertilizer.

"World fertilizer prices have increased substantially. Yet, under controls, domestic fertilizer prices are frozen. As a result, overseas markets threaten to drain away our fertilizer supplies," Butz said in a speech prepared for deliverly to a Farm Credit System anniversary meeting at Champaign, Illinois.

Butz said the U.S. needs fertilizer to back up the government's campaign for all-out farm production in 1974 in an attempt to halt or slow food inflation by boosting supplies.

"Those who favor fertilizer controls believe they will help hold down food prices. They certainly will not if, as may well happen, adequate fertilizer is not available for American farmers," the agriculture secretary added.

To his Illinois audience and to others in recent weeks, Butz has been hammering also on his argument that controls on food eventually harm consumers by discouraging farm production.

"We increased milk prices recently because milk production is down 3 per cent this year, and our problem is to get production," Butz told a consumer forum recently at a suburban Virginia shopping center. He said farmers are not likely to boost production to meet consumer demands unless they can foresee a profit for their work and investment.

Butz also lectured his consumer audience on another key point in the current farm-food picture: Proposals for export controls to hold down domestic price increases by keeping more U.S. farm production at home. Looking around the suburban shopping mall, the agriculture secretary called for a show of hands on how many people there used imported appliances and cameras, or drove imported cars. Many did.

Any saving on food would be offset by higher prices for the imported products if agricultural exports were not used to strengthen the dollar abroad, Butz said. Then, he added his clincher.

"You all drove over here today. But without agricultural exports to pay for imported fuel, the price of gasoline would be higher — if indeed you could get gasoline," he said.

Country-rock party set at Amphitheater

UNIVERSAL CITY — A country-rock concert will be presented in Universal Studios' Amphitheater starting at noon Saturday and Sunday.

Four top recording artists, Waylon Jennings, Commander Cody and the Lost Planet Airmen, Roger McGuinn and The New Riders of the Purple Sage kick off this new concept in concerts.

All seats are reserved and tickets may be obtained as late as showtime at the Amphitheater box-office. Tickets are also on sale at all Sears Ticketrons; Liberty and Mutual agencies; Pacific Stereo, 637 S. Hill St., and all Wallich's stores.

FRINGE BENEFIT — Billy Jim Hawkins (James Stewart) is taken by surprise when ex-movie queen Debbie Lane (Sheree North) kisses him in gratitude for defending her husband in "Murder in Movieland," premiere episode of MGM-TV's "Hawkins," airing on CBS Oct. 2. Stewart plays a country lawyer.

Philharmonic plans six pops concerts

LOS ANGELES — Zubin Mehta and three guest conductors, Andre Kostelanetz, Josef Krips and Edo de Waart, will direct the Los Angeles Philharmonic in the six Saturday Celebrity Pop programs of the 1973-74 season beginning Nov. 10.

Guest soloists on the series include soprano Beverly Sills, mezzo-soprano Claudine Carlson; pianists Vladmimir Ashkenazy and Andre Watts; guitarist Pepe Romero; and on one program, members of the Philharmonic.

At the opening event, Russian pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy plays Mozart's Concerto in C, K. 467, of late known as the "Elvira Madigan" Concerto, and Mehta conducts the orechestra in the same composer's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," plus orchestral dances by Handel, Mozart, Brahms, Dvorak, Copland and others.

The second concert, on Jan. 5, is devoted to the rhythms and melodies of Spanish music. Andre Kostelanetz is the conductor of the program which lists such works as "El Amor Brujo," "Capriccio Espagnol," "Concierto Flamenco," "Espani Cani," and "Alborada del Gracioso." Claudine Carlson and Pepe Romero aro are the soloists.

On Jan. 26 Viennese maestro Josef Krips conducts a program titled "A Night in Vienna." Featured will be waltzes, polkas, marches and overtures by Johann Strauss Jr., and Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Andre Watts plays two works under Edo de Waart's direction on Feb. 16 — Liszt's "Totentanz," and "Symphonic Variations" by Franck. De Waart leads the orchestra in Dvorak's "New World" Symphony.

On March 16 Mehta conducts the second installment of a program introduced last season, "The Philharmonic on Parade," which several of the Philharmonic's musicians as featured soloists, playing with the orchestra concertos and other solo works.

In lethal doses

At least 300 Japanese deaths in recent years are attributed to eating polluted seafood, and another 9,000 victims have been crippled. Researchers have found alarming amounts of mercury and other poisonous chemicals in fish pulled from Japan's coastal waters.

'The usual slop'

New TV season limps on tube

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —The piecemeal arrival of the new television season is an indication of how powerfully the recent writers' strike hit the networks.

New series are merely drifting in as they become ready, and the result is that there has not been, and really cannot be, the kind of blockbuster campaign the networks like to use to launch a season.

Viewers, however, are beneficiaries of the situation because they don't have to watch the various new series all at once—and opposite each other on competing networks— in the usual one-week premiere period.

So this 1973-74 season is, in one sense, bowing in with a certain civility—allowing us the leisure to watch the debuts of freshman entries over a reasonable period of time.

The new semester began, technically, on Sept. 10, and the networks tried, publicly at least, not to make much of an ado about the fact that shows would be late in arriving.

If anything, television executives tried to maintain a business-as-usual attitude, and, for the most part, simply allowed viewers to become aware of this season's fragmented start as they tuned in.

As someone has noted, the first important thing about the new television season is finding it.

This development does not make the networks happy at all. Since so many of their regular new series are always dreadful, big promotion campaigns are important corporate weapons in conning viewers through the garbage that is presented with great promises of quality.

A logical question, of course, is why the networks don't concentrate more on getting quality into their series, and less on promotional coverup.

And the answer seems to be what one constantly hears in regard to much corporate thinking about new series: the networks, as cautious as possible in protecting their ratings flanks, generally select new projects more on the basis of what is least apt to fail rather than on the basis of what may be exciting.

This is defensive programming, pure and simple, and that is a euphemistic description of it. While there have been breakthroughs here and there, the attitude behind most of the programming does not often enough live up to the promotion, which, to no one's surprise under the circumstances, has become an enormously important protective weapon in the networks' corporate structures.

In short, promise them anything, but give them, for the most part, the usual slop in the weekly series.

And one of the salutary effects of the writers' strike is that, by enabling us to see the new series more leisurely and carefully, we can avoid the promotional con jobs and see much of the slop for exactly what it is.

Dance Theater sets tryouts for Saturday

POMONA — Valley Concert Dance Theater will hold tryouts for the 1973-74 season at its headquarters, 1447 Old Settlers Lane, starting at 10 a.m. Saturday.

The tryouts are open to dancers from 12 to 28 years old who have had at least three years of ballet or jazz dance training.

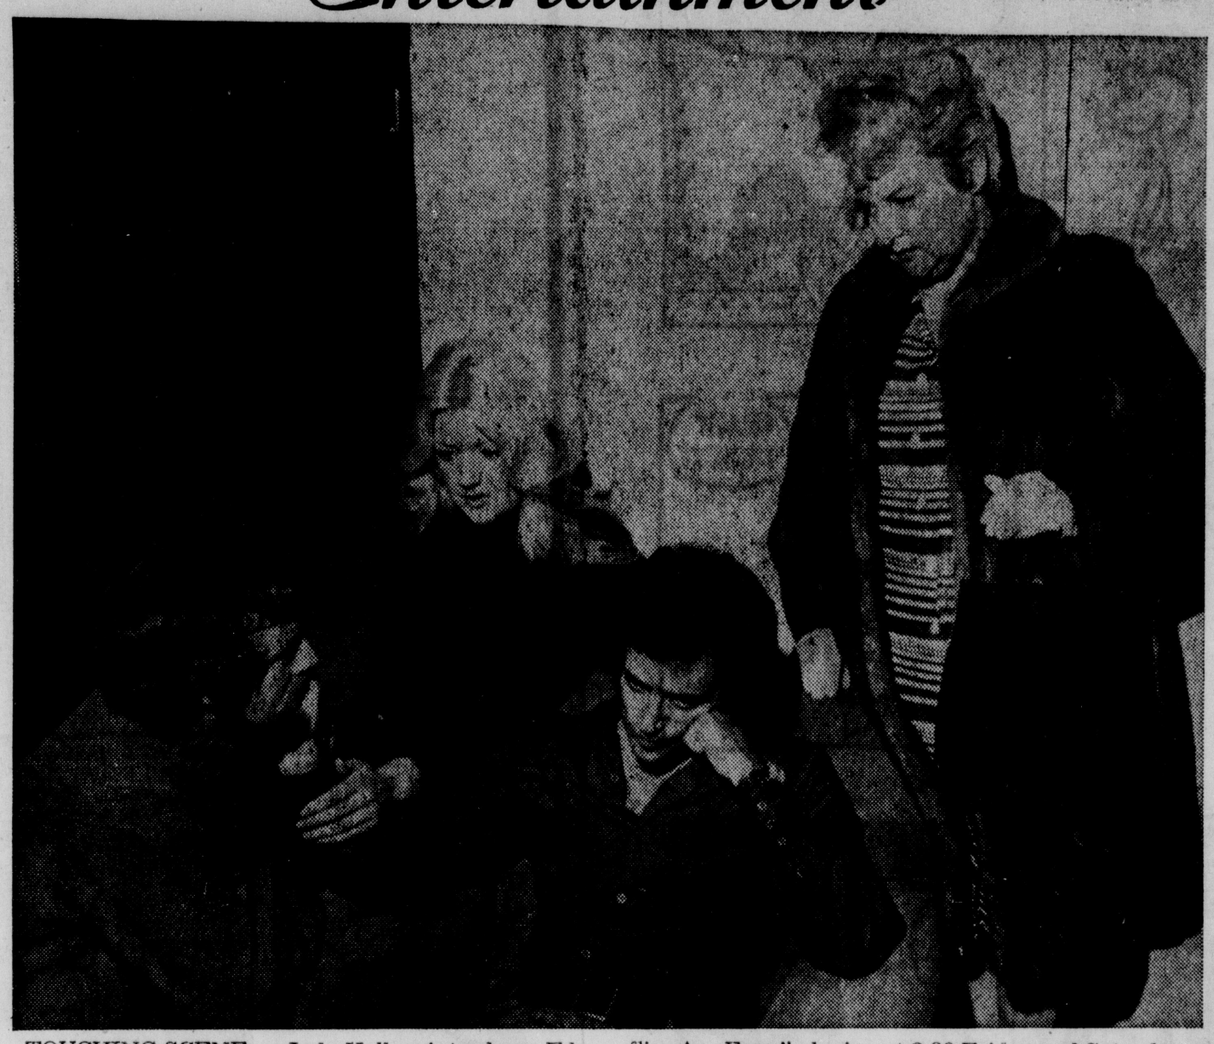
Both ballet and jazz will be featured in the new season. On the schedule is a performance of the "Nutcracker" and a new two-hour program choreographed by JoAnn Warner, VCDT artistic director.

The company is headed by recently elected president Pat Gousha. Other new officers are Sally Taylor, vice president; Miss Warner, artistic director; Jerry Carson, treasurer; Valerie Gibson, secretary; Thomas Izor, staff photographer, and Richard Kimball, publicity director.

Further information can be obtained from Kimball at 987-4468.

Two killed in tribal warfare

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (UPI)—Two men were killed and 15 injured in a five-hour fight over a tribal border dispute in the Chimbu District over the weekend, police said. More than 50 natives were arrested by riot police who confiscated hundreds of weapons, including bows and arrows, spears and war clubs.



TOUCHING SCENE — Judy Kellem introduces Edward Abry, center, to Tom Schultz by placing the hand of the blind guitarist, (Abry) on the other's face, as Martha Fuller looks on. It is a scene from the Valley Community Theater, production of "Butterflies Are Free," playing at 8:30 Friday and Saturday nights. Thurman Brown directs the Leonard Gershe romantic comedy. Reservations can be made at 622-6954.

Citrus to launch 'Evenings at Eight'

AZUSA — Citrus College Community Services opens its 12th season of Evenings at Eight series with a performance by flamenco dancers Jose Greco and Nana Lorca in the auditorium at 8 p.m. Oct. 30.

They will give a lecture-demonstration-recital describing the history of Spanish music and dance.

On Nov. 8, the Ballet Folklorico from the University of Zacatecas will perform the dances of major and remote areas of Mexico. The company of 30 young dancers will appear in costumed numbers which have been praised for excellence and authenticity in dances, technique, music and costumes.

The third program scheduled is the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, coming Nov. 14. Featuring harpsichordist Malcolm Hamilton and conductor Neville Marriner, the orchestra has been playing to sell-out audiences at the Los Angeles Music Center.

The Citrus College Chamber Singers, under the direction of Ben Bollinger, will perform Dec. 14. They will sing a variety of songs, ranging from classic anthems to traditional carols. On Jan. 15, mountaineer Dean Caldwell will narrate his Peruvian adventures with film. Gaining world-wide recognition for climbing the face of Yosemite's El Capitan, Caldwell has since climbed Nevado Yerupaja (21,100 feet) in the Peruvian Andes.

Stewart Udall, Secretary of the Interior of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, will discuss the energy crisis, Feb. 8.

Pointing out that environment and ecology is no longer a problem for technologists, Udall hits at the impending depletion of oil, gas and other resources and proposes alternative plans to avert a crisis.

On March 21, the National Shakespeare Company will perform "Julius Caesar." Director William Francisco fits his production to the 20th Century through contemporary form. Set in the midst of a South American Revolution, this innovative and exciting drama gives a timeless message, while remaining loyal to the Shakespearean script.

Evening's at Eight concludes its program on April 4, with basketball star Bill Russell. The long-time NBA center will address himself to the topics of race, politics, and athletics. Russell's message is one of action, involvement and change. He speaks not as a black athlete or as a celebrity, but as a man. All seats are reserved. Season tickets offer a 40 per cent savings. The cost is $12 for adults and $8 for children under 12. General admission for single events is $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children. Group discounts are available.

Greek show slated in Santa Monica

SANTA MONICA — Academy Award-winning Greek composer Mikis Theodorakis will appear with a company of singers and dancers in the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium at 8 p.m. Oct. 18.

Composer of the Academy Award-winning film scores for "Zorba the Greek" and "Z", Theodorakis has helped make Greek music popular throughout the world.

Although he is widely known and has been cited for his musical achievements by many organizations in the United States, Theodorakis has never performed in this country. This engagement will be part of his first American tour, which will take the ensemble to 20 major cities across the United States.

Combining traditional Greek folk music with the popular melodies of contemporary Greece, Theodorakis' many songs, symphonies, cantatas, and film scores have helped to create a new identity for Greek people.

Mail orders are now being accepted at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

Martha Raye to star in 'No, No, Nanette'

SAN BERNARDINO — Cavern-mouthed comedienne Martha Raye, starring in the Broadway musical hit, "No, No, Nanette," will highlight the 27th season of the San Bernardino Civic Light Opera.

"No, No, Nanette," labeled the "new 1925 musical," will close the season, running from May 10 through May 18 at the California Theater of Performing Arts in San Bernardino.

Season tickets can be obtained at the Civic Light Opera box office, 2079 N. E St., phone 882-2545.

Opening the season will be Rodgers and Hammersteins "Flower Drum Song, Nov. 9 through Nov. 17. The musical "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," will open on Feb. 22 for a seven-night engagement.

Miss Raye, who starred in Civic Light Opera's successful, "Hello, Dolly!" will play the part of Pauline, the role she performed in the Broadway production of "Nanette."

The musical boasts some of Vincent Youmans' most melodic songs, including "I Want To Be Happy," and "Tea For Two."

"Flower Drum Song," as colorful as Chinese jade, is among Rodgers and Hammerstein's long list of musical hits. Set in San Francisco's Chinatown, it unravels in song and dance, two poignant love stories, and the age-old struggle between the young and older generation.

The February production, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," catipulted Zero Mostel to stardom. It is a tongue-in-cheek blending of the world's oldest sure-fire gags, set to music.

'SUMMER' STAR — Academy Award-winning actress Eva Marie Saint makes her Los Angeles stage debut in "Summer and Smoke" at the Huntington Hartford Theater Oct. 1-20. Also starring in the Tennessee Williams drama is Ronny Cox. Tickets are on sale at the box office and at Liberty and Mutual agencies.

L.A. Council OKs expansion of 4-day week

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Encouraged by a poll which indicates city employes like working four 10-hour days a week, the City Council has voted to expand the trial program to include more than twice as many workers.

Nine more city departments, or about 1,250 workers, will be involved in the "4-10 plan," joining the 1,200 already working the four-day week.

A poll sent out to 3,500 city employes was introduced in the council session, stating the 80.8 percent of those who responded favored the plan. Most of the city's 18,000 civilian employes under the City Council's control still work five eight-hour days a week.

Councilman Gilbert W. Lindsay registered the only dissenting vote in a 10-1 decision. Lindsay argued that employes' efficiency would drop during the final hours of the lengthened day in the 4-10 program.

Councilman Robert J. Stevenson, sponsor of the program, produced a study showing increased efficiency in businesses operated on a 4-10 basis.

Two more councilmen, Ernani Bernardi and Billy G. Mills, said they favored expanding the program to cover most of the city's civilian employes.

Temple Street, Los Angeles, California, 90012, until 9:00 o'clock A.M. on October 9, 1973, on which date they will be publicly opened and read, for the planting of trees and the furnishing and placing of tree well covers together with non-metallic pipe, concrete removal, cast in place porous concrete and other incidental and appurtenant work, including plant maintenance. This work will be authorized by the County at intervals during the contractual period by means of several "Notices to Plant". Said notices will be issued for planting of twenty (20) or more trees. This project is estimated to cost less than $55,000.00, all in accordance with the provisions of the Plans and Specifications and Instructions to Bidders therefor which are filed in Room 383.

Proposal must be submitted on forms prepared and furnished for the purpose, which may be obtained at the Information Desk in the lobby of the Los Angeles County Road Department Administration Building, 1540 Alcazar Street, Los Angeles, California 90033 at which office bidders may also purchase copies of the Plans and Specifications for the contemplated work for the price of $7.14 plus Sales Tax per set, not refundable. A mail address and a phone number must be left at the aforementioned office which the prospective bidder agrees is sufficient to reach him.

Each submitted proposal must be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check, or a surety bond, payable to the County of Los Angeles in an amount equivalent to at least ten (10) percent of the total aggregate bid price of such proposal, as a guaranty that the bidder, if his proposal be accepted, will enter into and execute the awarded contract, and furnish the required bonds in connection therewith, in accordance with the terms of the aforementioned Specifications and Instructions to Bidders. In the event that a surety bond is submitted in lieu of a check, it shall be subjected to the condition that the surety thereon be approved by the County Auditor and County Counsel.

The Board of Supervisors reserves the right to reject any or all bids, and to waive technical errors and discrepancies, if to do so seems to best serve the interests of the County.

Pursuant to the provisions of Sections 1770 to 1777, inclusive, of the Labor Code of the State of California, the Board of Supervisors has ascertained the general prevailing rate of per diem wages for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the proposed contract, and it will be required that not less than said rates be paid to all such workmen employed or engaged on the work. Complete wage rate schedules are on file at the offices of the Board of Supervisors and the County Road Department and are included in the contract specifications available at the Road Department.

The rate of compensation for any classification not listed in the schedule, but which may be required to execute the proposed contract, shall be commensurate and in accord with the rates specified for similar or comparable classifications or for those performing similar or comparable duties.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS TO BIDDERS: Bidders must satisfy themselves by personal examination of location of the proposed work and by such other means as they may prefer as to the actual conditions and requirements of the work, and shall not at any time after submission of the bid dispute, complain, or assert that there was any misunderstanding in regard to the nature or amount of work to be done.

The contractor to whom this contract is awarded will be required, before execution of the contract by the County Board of Supervisors, to file with the County Board of Supervisors surety bonds as follows:

A "Faithful Performance Bond" amounting to 100% of the total contract price is required for all contracts.

A "Payment Bond" (labor and material) amounting to 50% of the total contract price is required for all contracts which have a total contract price in excess of $10,000.

DON'T BE SO MODEST!

Brag a little...

You can't afford to be modest. After all, you're in business to sell. You have to tell buyers what you have to offer, why it pays them to do business with you, why you and your service and prices and products and sales policies are best.

The most economically effective way you can brag to your prospective customers is with a display advertisement in the Progress Bulletin.

Late cosmetic tycoon's empire shifting focus

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI) —When flamboyant cosmetics tycoon William Penn Patrick flew his P51 fighter plane into the ground last summer, killing himself, it also destroyed the "Holiday Magic" pyramid.

It seemed to many, including the Securities and Exchange Commission, that the cosmetics end of Patrick's business was itself no more than a cosmetic for a system of selling distributorships.

Now, under the direction of Thomas Donnelly, 38, a mild Irishman who never sold a distributorship in his life, Holiday Magic is starting over at selling lipstick, shampoo and face cream.

"The day I took over as president, eight senior executives resigned," says Donnelly. "We implemented a new marketing system, geared strictly to retailing. We stopped the further sale of any distributorships."

Donnelly says Patrick himself planned to make the change, and it was approved by his widow, who controls the William Penn Patrick Trust, which owns most of the company.

In an interview with UPI, Donnelly conceded there was "very strong governmental pressures questioning the legality of the prior program."

Holiday Magic was, and still is, involved in massive litigation with the federal government, many states and at least 200 civil plaintiffs. The company had platoons of lawyers to prop up the pyramid.

Now, Donnelly said, the lawyers' job is to extricate Holiday Magic from the courts. The firm has abandoned its defense of the pyramid sales operation and is about to sign a consent decree with the SEC.

"Although there is no admission that the prior system was illegal, there were too many loopholes," he said, "too many areas where abuse could take place. And abuse did take place, there is no question about it."

Under the old scheme a distributor, by investing a specified sum, could obtain cosmetics at a discount. If, instead of selling cosmetics, he persuaded others to invest in distributorships, he could make more money.

The government contended that Holiday Magic was, in fact, selling securities, and doing so illegally under the Securities and Exchange Act.

Under terms of the consent decree, Donnelly said, the company "is going to make restitution to anyone who has invested at any time in this company as a distributor." He said the restitution, although it will be adjusted in cases where the distributors actually made money, involves "a tremendous liability—I couldn't even put a figure on it."

Donnelly believes that Holiday Magic, which he estimates will have total sales this year of $45 million, can, by concentrating on direct retail sales, "become a household word like Avon." Avon's sales are about $1 billion a year and the direct sales market has been barely tapped, according to the new Holiday Magic president.

The company's headquarters is a modest building on a back street in this suburb north of San Francisco. It has manufacturing plants in Cleveland, Toronto, London, and Sydney. The Australian facility is one of that country's largest producers of aerosol products as well as cosmetics.

The firm has sales operations throughout the world. Until recently it also had more than a dozen subsidiary companies engaged in such activities as Mind Dynamics, sales motivation and personality improvement —all of which were embroiled in pyramid schemes.

"All of these subsidiary companies are in the process of being re-evaluated or disbanded," said Donnelly. "We are very serious about the change. Our purpose is to develop a good cosmetics line and to retail it at at fair price and a fair profit.

40% of wives are now holding jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Whether by economic necessity or a greater desire to pursue their own careers, about 40 per cent of American wives now hold jobs, the Census Bureau's chief testified Monday.

Director Vincent P. Barabba did not speculate on the reasons, but said that figures compiled from the last national census in 1972 showed 40 out of every 100 wives were in the labor force. This compared to 25 of 100 in 1950.

Among women with preschool children, 30 out of 100 were working last year compared to only 12 in 1950.

While the proportion of husband-wife working teams increased sharply during the period, so did joint-income. Barabba said the median husband-wife income in 1972 was $13,900 —compared to $4,900 a couple decades earlier.

Among the other statistics Barabba gave a Senate subcommittee conducting hearings on trends and pressures affecting family life:

—The median age in 1972 for first marriages was 23 for men and 21 for women, nearly one year older than the mid-1950's.

—The average number of children born today is 2.4 per married woman, compared to 3.3 in 1960.

—The average family size is 3.5 persons compared to 3.7 in 1960.

Texas town finally accepts young artists

By TOM GEDDIE

EDOM, Tex. (UPI) —Mr. Spot's been around town a long time, mooching meals off back door steps. He never took to people much until Doug and Sharon Brown came along three years ago with their new ideas and different ways.

Sharon began feeding the black and white mongrel dog every day. She patched him up once when he got hit by a car, and saved his life when somebody filled his belly with poison.

Now he spends his days lazing in the sun, right out there where everybody can see him on the front porch of one of the arts and crafts shops run by the young couple and six of their friends.

Mr. Spot was one of the first to accept the Browns in Edom, a tiny (population 201) East Texas community cut off by green farmland, blacktop roads and age. Young people leave town after school and art is a Norman Rockwell drawing from the front of a Saturday Evening Post.

People suspicious

"People were suspicious of us at first," said Suzanne Ray, an "outsider" who drives 20 miles from Tyler every day to make jewelry as a member of the Edom Craft Community. "They'd never seen anyone make a living this way."

There were rumors in Sunday School about "those hippies," about wild drug parties and goodness knows what else.

"They would have been just as suspicious of a herd of kangaroos living in the field out there," Sharon said. "You know, just anything different, they weren't used to."

Sharon and Doug Brown opened the Potters Brown shop to sell Doug's pottery and pretty soon some more artists moved in and they all got together and held a fair last year.

Doing it again

It was so successful they're doing it again Saturday and Sunday, featuring paintings, sculpture, batik, macrame, prints, photography, weaving, leather goods, furniture, knives, jewelry and glassware. Artists will be coming from as far away as Georgia.

The first fair "sort of polarized people," Sharon said. "People who thought we were sort of okay came to our defense and are really behind us now.

"That's just one of the things about this part of the country, and I guess everywhere in rural America," she said. "People just don't accept outsiders right off. You've got to prove yourself."

Doug and Sharon finally felt they had been accepted when their neighbors voted them into the volunteer fire department—the one with the truck that was used in the Korean war.

"I really feel like I have an identity out here," Sharon said. "Even if some people are suspicious, they know I'm alive."

Poets launch pennies drive

LOSANGELES (UPI) —The California Federation of Chaparral Poets launched a "Pennies for Poetry" drive Sunday to finance a revival of "Poetry Day in California" Oct. 15.

Gov. Ronald Reagan canceled the observance of "Poetry Day" in 1970 in an economy move.

Federation spokesman Scholer Bangs said his group has mailed the first penny of the campaign to Gov. Reagan and hopes other California poets—a total of two million according to Bangs—will follow suit.

"When Gov. Reagan opens his mail tomorrow," Bangs said, "a single penny will drop out of just one envelope. But we hope by the end of the week his desk will be buried under by 'Pennies for Poetry.'"
